LETTER FROM LESLIE PRESCOTT TO HER FRIEND, BEATRICE GRIMSHAW.

DEAR BEE: It looks to me, from some of the letters you have been writing me lately, that you are thinking very seriously of marrying your young man.

I have only one question to ask, is he an orphan?

You have told me that he was an only son and, that being the case, let me warn you if his mother is still alive you are laying up for yourself great unhappiness in marrying him.

Why is it, Bee, that mothers are always trying to marry off their daughters and always trying to hang on to their sons?

I expect Freud would have an explanation for this. But surely all mothers who have a son are not like this. You saw Jack's mother at the wedding and you also saw that angular, prissy-mouthed girl that trotted around with her. Well, that's the girl his mother wanted Jack to marry if he couldn't keep him unmarried.

Unfortunately for her, Jack tells me that my mouth is the most kissable one in all the world. Anyway at least my mouth turns up at the corners and her's turn down, and I got Mrs. Prescott's darling boy and Priscilla Bradford did not.

Up to date Jack has been on my side of a controversy in which his mother and Miss Bradford seem to imply that I am an extravagant, frivolous flirt. But, honestly, I am going to do something which I shall consider perfectly innocent and this Bradford woman is going to see it, put her own construction on it and Jack is going to believe it.

There, I have warned you against that pitfall. Now there is another which looms up even bigger than a girl's mother-in-law, and that is the money question.

I expect, Bee, dear, it is because every man before marriage has spent his own money just as he darned pleased and had no responsibility except his own free will, that it takes him quite a while to get it into his head that, in this particular partnership we call marriage, the man is the receiver of all moneys of the firm and the woman should be the disbursing officer of most of it.

Chivalry Means More Than Knightly Manners

An ex-Rainbow veteran is wondering whether chivalry ever will be revived. He blames the women to a large degree for the lack of courtesy shown on the part of some men.

Of course, the old chivalry of knights who donned armour to fight for their "ladies fair" never will return.

But even in this day when women assert they can fight their own battles, plenty of men still are working for them and protecting them.

The chivalrous instinct does not die easily. It goes deeper than flowing plumes and knightly manners. Disillusionment that followed the war seemed to kill it. But it will come back.

Doubting Veteran
Dear Miss Lee: Do you think that chivalry ever will be revived? I think that it should be second only to religion. I believe the women themselves are helping destroy one of the best things that make living worth while. I don't like to see so many of them acting like men in lots of ways and some women are superior to some men in intelligence. But I think God intended that the man should fight the woman's battles and bear her burdens as far as possible. I am not trying to lay all the blame on the women, for lots of men do not know the meaning of the word "chivalry." I will say I am too old-fashioned to live in the modern days. Anyhow, I hope they never will come when there is no courtesy to the women.

I was 27 years old and go with a nice girl of 27. EX-RAINBOW VETERAN.

Keep on hoping, but at the same time, try to adjust yourself to changing conditions. Men do still fight women's battles, in many instances. They do it in a less picturesque way than did the knights of bygone days. Instead of fighting with spears, they fight day after day in the world of business.

It is true that women are partly to blame for the present seeming lack of chivalry. They are in a period of transition, and will "find" themselves some day.

Fickle, Perhaps
Dear Miss Lee: I am a girl of 18. I met a fellow of 23 a year ago. Six months ago I met a fellow and thought I cared for him, but he was different now, as he does not care for me. I see where I was wrong. I was too young to love him, as he still loves me and I love him.

I refused to let him come to see me while I was sick. He told mother his life was not worth anything since we quit. But he always wanted to talk of marriage. I love him, but I cannot marry him. I would like to be proper for me to write him a letter, asking him to forgive me!

Yours, LESLIE.

Tale of Mustache
Dear Martha Lee: I am a girl of 15, considered very beautiful. I am very much in love with a young man who also is considered very beautiful. The only thing that stands in the way is that I don't think he loves me. I cannot persuade him to love me. I love him, but I cannot marry him. I would like to be proper for me to write him a letter, asking him to forgive me!

Yours, LESLIE.

This Way to Curl Hair Is Fine for Outdoor Girl

The silmerine method of curling the hair is the proper thing for either bobbed or long hair before going motoring, boating or golfing, or indulging in any outdoor sport or exercise. It not only gives the hair the most beautiful wavy and curly appearance imaginable, but wind or heat will not take the curl out. The curliness is quickly acquired and lasts much longer than where waving tongs are used. Besides, the hair is bright and lustrous, instead of dull and dead looking. When combed out it is as nice and fluffy as if it had just been shampooed. Just get a bottle of liquid silmerine at any drug store, follow the easy directions, and you will be simply delighted.—Advertisement.

Expecting Too Much
Dear Miss Lee: I am a girl 18 years old. We have just moved to Indianapolis from New York. I have been going with the boys for about three years. But there is only one boy I care for. And I think he likes me. He came to visit me not so long ago. He acted as always. But since he went back, he has not been writing often, and when he does write it is a page. The girls are wild about him. Do you think he has found some one else that he likes better? Would you write to him, or just forget about him? DOLELY.

Many boys are poor correspondents, so that should not worry you. Don't give up other boy friends for him and don't expect him to give up other girls. But, if you enjoy his letters, keep up the correspondence, always keeping it on a friendship basis, of course. Do not expect too much of him.

Parents Object
Dear Miss Lee: I went away and was in love with a boy. He was in love with me, too. But my parents did not like him. Now I am back and some one wanted to see me. What shall I do? Go to see him?

YOURS TRULY.
Do your parents still object? If so, find out why, and either convince them they are wrong, or do as they ask.

Don't go to see the boy. You might invite him to call, if you overcome your parents' objections.

Another One
My Dear Miss Lee: I have been going with a young man for almost two years and we had always been in love with each other. But I suddenly tired of him. There is another young man who I am sure is in love with me, but he has stood back because of the first young man. I like the second
