Bomb Wrecks Home
By United Press
ST. LOUIS, Mo., July 14.—The home of Egnazio S. Salla, 56, a fruit dealer, was partially wrecked and windows in nearby houses shattered by a bomb today.

GENERAL GOURAUD has made it known that on his return to France he will recommend that the Rainbow Division be decorated with the Fourragere, an honor which but few organizations have won and a much-coveted glory. Each soldier is entitled to wear a green and white cord placed about the shoulder. It has come down from the ancients as a signal for bravery and chivalry.

Little Micky Shea, one time "top kick" of the 169th regiment from New York, was everything from spilling to prima donna at the Washington Park bouts Friday night. Whatever Shea may be doing, he ought to be cashing in on his comedy. As the fellows say, he is "all the way there and half way back" when it comes to wit and wisdom. Shea, between rounds, did everything from shadow boxing to thanking the multitudes for having elected him President of the United States.

"Indianapolis is a great town. Not too big, not too little," say the visitors. "We have had the best time ever and want to come back sometime," they declare. Although the little home town has some of the characteristics of a big city, the boys like the prevailing congeniality and the fact that it is possible to meet someone you know once in a while.

Thomas Alexander, one of the 169th boys, went through the war without a scratch or a bruise. Discharged, he went back to Michigan to marry. Old Man Fate touched him out when Alexander touched a live wire and was burned to death. When one of the waiting buddies said, "Where's Tom Alexander?" he heard the foregoing story.

TWO units of the Rainbow Division which fought side by side during the world war, had been pitted against each other more than fifty years before in the Civil War. The 169th New York made a fine record in the Union Army, while the Virginia contingent followed Lee beneath the stars and bars of the confederacy.

They've been talking about how widely distributed are the members of the old Rainbow bunch. We'll say they're widely distributed. They're cosmopolitan. Just look at that Hibernian beak from the old 165th. Here comes a Semitic prospector from the same old outfit. Used to call them the 169th the "Fighting Irish." Now and then you see a Bacchanalian tint to the best of them. A pair of Scandinavian mud hooks come slapping down the floor. They are from Minnesota. There are the Alabamians, who fall so true to Darwin's variation theory that no two are ever alike. Oh, but we're cosmopolitan. We Irish is.

Major General Robert H. Tyndall, Indiana's own, drew a tremendous ovation when he made a short talk before the convention Friday afternoon. It was evident that Bob made himself known throughout the division when scuffling was the vogue.

"Doggone, but I'm glad," said Paul Rhoadarmer, now in the law offices of Mote and Goodrich, but five years ago a common redneck in the 150th. Rhoadarmer's joy came from just having met Arthur Ellis of New England, his lieutenant during the war. "The last time I saw him was just a minute before a shell fragment scalped me," Rhoadarmer said. "And that fellow," he said, pointing to a conspicuously tall chap, "was my corporal. The bird that dragged me to a shell hole. It's no wonder the boys are glad to get back."

Everybody thinks Lew Shank ought to have been a colonel. "Why that auctioneer guy is the funniest thing I ever heard," one fellow remarked. "There's no question about it. Lew went over and went over big in his talk to the gang. Lew got a tremendous kick out of the fellows, too, because afterward he said, 'Concern the luck, them boys is great chaps. If it hadn't been for Sarah and me bein' how I was so old, I'd give a cookie to have been with them boys.'"

"We are changing Gouraud's itinerary to include a trip to the Yellowstone Park," Colonel Donovan said today. As General Gouraud looks into the grates of those geysers and grottoes, sees the flames and the seething waters, coming right from the sulphurous bowels of the earth, no doubt he will have a picture of what he gave the Germans about this time five years ago.

"Wild Bill" Donovan came to Indianapolis with the reputation, so far as his name is concerned, of being the most consistently wild Irishman on this side of the Atlantic. Where do they get the "wild" stuff? To every body he seems no more than a true, polished gentleman. Guess the Fritzies must have given him that terrible sounding moniker.

GENERAL GOURAUD has literally smiled himself into the good graces of Indianapolis and the entire convention. Scarcely a person hasn't said, "What a wonderful old fellow!" Still, Gouraud is no more than the typical Frenchman, congenial, amiable and to be venerated. "Bon Soir, Monsieur General."

Agricultural Agent McLain Says Loss at Present Price Would Average About $10 an Acre—Nothing for Their Labor.

Losses on the 16,000 acres of wheat in Marion County this year will total $160,000, or $10 an acre, if present low prices continue, said Royal McLain, county agricultural agent, today.

Figuring taxes at $2 an acre and interest at 6 per cent on a valuation of $160 an acre, which he said was cheap for land in this county, McLain estimated that each acre of wheat will cost the farmer $24.10. At an average yield of fifteen bushels an acre, sold for 90 cents a bushel, the producers will receive $13.50 for his year's toil, a loss of $10.60 an acre. "The farmer stands this loss by knocking off the $9 interest on his investment and laboring from dawn until dark for nothing," said the county agent. "No business man would do the same a minute. That $150 invested in non-taxable securities would yield a return of 8 or 9 per cent interest without a lick of work."

Items in the cost: Plowing, etc., $3.50 an acre; seed and planting, $2.50; fertilizer, $3.20; harvesting, $1.50; threshing, $1.80; hauling to elevator, 75 cents; 6 per cent interest on $150, $9; taxes, $2.

TAMMANY CHIEF FINDS MID-WEST POLITICIANS COOL

Efforts to Line Taggart and Brennan for Smith Unsuccessful.

By United Press
CHICAGO, July 14.—Powerful Democratic political leaders of the Middle West have apparently declined to participate in French Lick (Ind.) conferences designed to obtain nomination of Governor Al Smith, New York, as Democratic presidential candidate.

Charles F. Murphy, Tammany leader, and Philip Donahue, who holds the money bags of the New York organization, are in French Lick today. New York dispatches said they came west to line up George E. Brennan, Illinois Democratic "boss," and Tom Taggart, Indiana's bourbon leader, for Smith.

Brennan declared today he has no intention of going to French Lick. "I know nothing of any such conference," said Brennan. "I have not been invited and I have no intention of going down there."

Following Murphy's arrival, both Taggart and Murphy denied they would be a conference over presidential possibilities and the liquor question.

Reports in Democratic circles said such a meeting may have been "cancelled" owing to opposition of western Democrats to a wet candidate.

Murphy and Taggart assert they will discuss only minor details regarding the next national convention, according to statements at French Lick.
