—Martha Lee Says—

We All Desire Most Things Hardest to Get

That quirk in our natures which makes us forever want the things that are hardest to obtain is what keeps the world moving. Were it not for this desire, we should all settle back in contentment and rapidly decline into sluggishness.

Of course, quite often we overdo this progressiveness and become grasping. The point is that it is something just ahead, just out of reach, that stirs us to action.

Girls, Just Look!

Dear Miss Lee: I am a sheik 17 years old and am very good looking. All the girls are crazy about me, except the one I want. Please advise me how I may make her care for me. RUDOLPH.

Your modesty charms me. I really am amazed that even this one girl can resist your charms. Well, Rudolph, it is just possible that this girl prefers red-blooded boys to sheiks. I'd suggest that you put on khaki trousers (not bell-bottomed), roll your collar down and your sleeves up, get rid of the brilliantine in your hair and play tennis and baseball and swim, not worrying about the girls. Be a "real" boy, instead of a hot-house imitation, and boys, as well as girls, will like you. You could not very well improve your opinion on yourself, but you could make yourself more worthy of that opinion.

E. W. WORRIED: The best thing for you to do would be to go to your father, as he wants you.

Love's Path Thorny

Dear Miss Lee: For four years I have worked for one of the largest firms in the west side. I like my work and make good money. It took me months to train for this work. I trained in the shop where I now am located, still under the same man who taught my fingers to do the work. He is 28 years old and I am 22. He is married and has two children who are very nice. His wife and I are good friends. They cannot get along and fuss and fight all the time. Every one says it is her fault. He is a good man and I love him. He tells me he does and has promised that, if he ever gets a chance, he will marry me. He has not said he will divorce her and I would not let him. I could not be happy. If I were married when he could marry me, it would almost kill me.

Another man I go with is 26 years old. He, too, has a good job and spends all his money on me. I always wonder why he does not marry me. He is a good man and I love him. He tells me he does and has promised that, if he ever gets a chance, he will marry me. He has not said he will divorce her and I would not let him. I could not be happy. If I were married when he could marry me, it would almost kill me.

They say the second man is too good to me, because I don't appreciate the things he does for me. I do, but I can love only one man at a time. Shall I marry him and be miserable, or wait? It may be for years, and perhaps we never can marry. H. C.

I must disagree with you on one point. A "good" man would not think so little of his children that he would let a woman other than his wife that he loves her. So you see, I naturally think he is at fault, at least as much as his wife.

Couldn't you get a position doing the same kind of work, in another place? That would be best. If you cannot, avoid personal conversation with this man, at least. Your reputation is at stake.

LETTER FROM SYDNEY CARTON TO JOHN ALDEN PRESCOTT

Perhaps I'd better confess in the first place, dear old chap, that I am very much afraid—afraid of Leslie—afraid of myself—and most of all afraid of you.

You are such a fool, Jack. You never know when you are well off and all the while I feel that you are sitting over a volcano and that some day this married life of yours will go all fluey. Did you ever stop to think that there is a divorce for every eight marriages? Don't add to your possibilities of being that unlucky number eight.

Of course I cannot understand how Leslie feels about you, but, knowing you as I do, I know I wouldn't live with you a minute. Will you tell me just why you want to break up the friendship between Ruth Ellington and Leslie?

I happen to have known Ruth very well before she was married and, as you say, she was the gayest and brightest girl in her set. I know that something very terrible must have happened in the first year of her marriage, for she has never been the same since.

I never did like Harry Ellington. He is the most selfish, egotistical, arrogant man I have ever met, and that's going some.

What little I have seen of Ruth since her marriage has made me think she is a brave little thing who doesn't tell her troubles to every one, but I would like to tell Harry Ellington one thing. I believe I know Ruth well enough to prophesy that there are plenty of men who would be very glad to make love to her. There is always another man in the offing for a pretty neglected wife.

It always seems so strange to me that young husbands seem to feel that their wives are immune. You know as well as I, Jack, that you feel perfectly free to compliment and flirt with the wives of any young men of your acquaintance if they will let you, also that down deep in your heart you think you have the prettiest girl in town as your wife.

Then why should not all the other fellows try to make love to her if you neglect her? I have seen that so many times and I am satisfied that in the case of Ruth Ellington, if she ever falls in love with another man, she will very quickly tell Mr. Harry where he gets off. She isn't a woman to be blindly in love or blindly devoted.

Perhaps you have noticed this and that is the reason you wanted to keep Leslie away from her. Don't kid yourself, Jack. Leslie also has a mind of her own and she will exercise it in the selection of her friends, both men and women.

Because I know that I would take

Y. W. C. A. Notes

A club was organized July 10 at the Y. W. C. A. for Girl Reserves graduating from grade schools this June. This will be the Freshman Girl Reserve Club. Officers elected: President, Alma Teifert; vice president, Anna May Howard; secretary, Althea Huber, and treasurer, Elizabeth Schwomeyer. Tuesday, July 24, the club will have an all-day picnic at Camp Rockwood.

Leslie's part against you, for I know her well enough to know she is neither premeditated, nor jealous. I don't want to come over and get into any controversy. I know you would be just fool enough to commence one. You put me in wrong with her with that letter. I grow hot all over whenever I think of it. She will always think there is something between you and me that she should not know. Of course there is a lot that she should not know about you if she wants to be happy and that's what makes me afraid of her, for I tell you my friend, that if Leslie asks me anything about you, I'll tell her the truth.
