

FRENCH LEADER ATTENDS MASS AT CATHEDRAL

General Gouraud and Aides
Are Present at Religious Services.

Gen. Henri J. E. Gouraud, together with his aid, Lieutenant DeVibray, and Col. G. A. L. Dumont, military attaché with the French embassy at Washington, was the center of attention at 9 o'clock mass Sunday morning at St. Peter and Paul Cathedral. Fourteen and Meridian Sts. Visiting delegates of the Rainbow Division, communicants of the church and others were present to greet the venerated French general and to do homage to the boys of the Forty-Second Division.

A local committee headed by Sidney S. Miller accompanied the general's party. The Right Rev. Joseph Chastain, bishop of the Indianapolis diocese, invited General Gouraud to attend the services.

The Rev. Francis P. Duffey, chaplain of the 165th Regiment of New York, urged more interest in the religious life of America, declaring open public worship essential to the life of the country.

RAINBOW VETS END CONVENTION

Next Meeting to Be Held at Columbia, S. C.

Only a few Rainbow Division veterans remained in Indianapolis today, following the fifth annual reunion of the Rainbow Division Veteran Association.

The windup of the convention came with a memorial ceremony at Cadle Tabernacle Sunday afternoon.

Gen. Henri Gouraud of France, honorary president of the association; Col. William J. Donovan, retiring president; the Rev. Francis P. Duffey, famous war chaplain of the 165th New York, and Hilton U. Brown of Indianapolis spoke.

General Gouraud announced a memorial dedicated to the dead heroes of America would be erected in Champagne.

Saturday night the association held a banquet at the Manufacturers' building at the State fair ground.

The 1924 convention was awarded to Columbia, S. C.

It Was 'Some Evening' That Ben Spent; Spirits in a Bottle Wreck Our Hero

BY WALTER D. HICKMAN
HORACE was the pride of his mother.

And justly so. His mother expected him to hold up the honor of the family. There had been no scandal in Horace's family since his father was hanged. Families have to be so careful about their honor these days, especially when sons are so old-fashioned as to wear nightgowns.

Oh, me, oh, my, Horace was such a "good boy," but he was scared to death of lightning. It's too warm to attempt to be clever. All right. Will let you know what I am raving about. Just trying to tell you about Ben Turpin's latest comedy, "Where's My Wandering Boy This Evening?" It is not a problem drama, although Ben has several problems to solve. Ben is the Horace of the story.

The honor of the family was safe until a New York vampire landed in Cedarbrook or something sounding like that. The vamp couldn't tell when our cross-eyed hero was looking at her.

Horace had one night away from his mother's apron strings. What a night it was. The vampire was present, in fact the only one who was with Horace on his first night out. The night was spent in a lonely cottage during a storm. Or rather, the couple was absent from home until nearly 9 p. m. No wonder the whole village talked of the scandal. The only "kick" that Horace got out of his wild adventure was a stroke of lightning which nearly ruined his nightgown.

Poor Horace suffers with mental breakdown when his mother demands that to save the honor of the family, he must marry the vampire. The vamp gets hold of our hero's purse with all of his savings and she makes a rapid exit on the way to the altar.

Then poor Horace does have an attack of brain fever. He dreams that he is picking daisies in the Garden of Eden with the Vampire. Can you imagine Ben Turpin doing a "Spring Song" dance clad only in a nightgown?

In this new Turpin comedy there are some delightful burlesques. All in all it is a corking good entertainment. "Where's My Wandering Boy This Evening?" is the chief offering at the Ohio.

The heavier offering at the Ohio is Ethel Clayton in "The Remittance Woman." The story concerns wild doings in China when a sacred vase is stolen. All this adventure happens while Ethel Clayton is dreaming. Just hot weather entertainment only.

Lot of Human Touches
In "Are You a Failure?"

Here is a question: Are you a failure? Don't answer it, but go to the Apollo this week and see a movie bearing the name of the question.

It has at least one unique idea—a correspondence school for failures. Four lessons from this mail order school and any failure turns into success. That is what Lloyd Hughes learns in this movie.

The movie is concerned with the experiences of a lad (played by Lloyd Hughes) who is considered a failure in his home town. He lacks "backbone." His father before his death was a big man in the lumber district. The son didn't measure up to the size of his father's shoes.

The lad was not to blame as much as two maidenly aunts who had Mid-Victorian ideas about life. One of the aunts insisted that the lad wear over-shoes and a raincoat and carry an umbrella because it might rain some day. And they would not let him drink coffee because it was "bad for his liver." Now I ask you, who wouldn't be a failure with aunts like that?

But a peach of a girl had lot of faith in the lad. She was sure he was a sure he-man. The lad became ashamed of himself. Then he takes a course in a mail correspondence school. Then the change happens. He drinks coffee and goes out on the streets without his over-shoes and umbrella. Then he risks his life to break up a log jam and our lad becomes a success.

Much of the interest centers upon the work of Hughes. He knows how to act. He doesn't overdo his characterization. He reminds me a good deal of Gareth Hughes. Madge Bellamy is in the cast. Pretty as usual, which may be a break up a log jam and our lad becomes a success.

The bill introduces the fourth round of the "Third Leather Pushers Series," a news weekly, and the regular music.

Mickey Moore Wins

New Honors on Screen

One of George Barr McCutcheon's stories of old world royalty has been screened, and is on view at Mister Smith's all this week.

This story is "Truxton King." The action takes place in an imaginary principality in southern Europe, Graustark.

The story is one of a series that McCutcheon has written, centering around this little country.

John Griffith has the leading role, as King, an adventurous American, who is searching for excitement in Graustark. He finds plenty of it during his stay there, and also completes a little romance.

Little Mickey Moore should get a great deal of credit for the way he played the child king of Graustark. He made this a real and lovable character, and made it seem natural for his subjects to bow down to his diminutive highness.

"Truxton King" is interesting, has speedy action and a satisfactory love story. And it has Mickey Moore. At Mister Smith's all this week.—(By Observer).

Griffith's Best Movie

on View at Rialto

D. W. Griffith's masterpiece, "The Birth of a Nation," has been brought back to the city for a week's showing at the Rialto. This is a picture that has not lost its appeal.

We have seen this epoch-making play of Griffith's, and again felt the tense vividness and charm of the story, and again marveled at the wealth of material and wonderful detail that make "The Birth of a Nation" a true and real success.

The film that is being shown at the Rialto is a good print, and appears to be as new as the original. At the Rialto all this week.—(By Observer).

Jack Hoxie Has

An Exciting Time

Jack Hoxie is at the Isis for the first half of the week in "Wolf Prints," a western story.

Hoxie fans will see him in a tight situation, where a bandit, called "The Wolf," succeeds in changing identities with him and otherwise muddling up the situation.

There is a gold mine in question with the "Wolf" on the trail of the map of the location. After a running gun fight in the mountains, Hoxie manages to turn the tables on the outlaw and win the girl and save the mine.

At the Isis the first half of the week.—(By Observer).

Other attraction on view today include: "Spite Corner," at the Murat; "She Walked in Her Sleep," at English; Hope Vernon at the Lyric; and Blossom Heath Entertainers at the Palace.

OSBORN FAMILY MEETS

Reunion Is Held at Plainfield Church.

Miss Lillian Osborn of Indianapolis was re-elected secretary-treasurer of the Osborn family at a reunion Sunday on the grounds of the Quaker church at Plainfield, Ind. Other officers: President, Rollin Stanley, Crawfordville; vice president, Everett Newlin, Plainfield; and assistant secretary, Miss Evelyn Newlin, Plainfield.

Some members of the family journeyed from North Carolina to attend the reunion. A historical sketch of the family was presented. Games featured the afternoon program.

RECOGNITION OF MEXICO PARLEY IN FULL ACCORD

Satisfactory Agreement on
All Points Forecast
Before Saturday.

By United Press

MEXICO CITY, July 16.—The "recognition of Mexico" conference began today what is believed to be its last week, with the end in sight.

Satisfactory agreement before Saturday is predicted and the American delegates, Warren and Payne, plan to leave to report to Washington regarding their success.

Recognition of Mexico by the United States may follow—probably within a year.

The conference has been under way nine full weeks, during which time the United States delegates have laid before their Mexican conferees the objectionable points, from the American point of view, in the present constitution of Mexico.

The results of the conversations are to be laid before Secretary of State Hughes.

The articles were valued at $60.

Pimples

BLOOD impurities are pumped by the heart into the face. That is what causes that grainy appearance, that muddiness, sallowness, pimples, blackheads, acne, red spots, and that impossible "something" which no face cream, massage, or face powder can cover up or beautify! The foundation for a beautiful skin simply is not there, and no face treatment can give it to you. But increase your red-blood-cells, and quickly the ruby tint of purity begins to glow in the cheeks, the complexion becomes Venus-like and immaculate! Try it. It will do it every time. S. S. S. builds the red-blood-cells you need for a beautiful complexion. Begin using S. S. S. at once, and give yourself what you have been working for, for years.
