HARDING BELIEVES ALASKA SHOULD DEVELOP ITSELF

Territory Will Have to Worry Along Without Use of Government Money.

By LAWRENCE MARTIN
(Copyright, 1923, by United Press)
ABOARD PRESIDENT HARDING'S TRAIN, EN ROUTE TO SEWARD, Alaska, July 18.—President Harding is going to have a Cabinet meeting on Alaskan problems soon after boarding the transport Henderson for the return to the United States.

Secretary Work, Wallace and Hoover will complete their intimate study of fisheries, coal, railroad and general mining with hearings at Anchorage and Seward. The data will be assembled and discussed in a Cabinet conference with these officials and with unofficial cabinet newspapermen who have studied Alaskan conditions as searchingly and painstakingly as the officials.

The President will work out a general plan for his Alaska speech to be delivered at Seattle July 27. He has very clear impressions and convictions regarding Alaska as a result of his personal contact on the coast and in the interior.

These he intends to express in his speech. Among his Alaska convictions in the Seattle speech, Harding will conclude the country's future is a matter of gradual and slow development for the coming decade at least; that it would be a mistake to try to "build" Alaska or give it prosperity by artificial means, including the use of Government money; that the people here should be allowed to work out their own destinies without too much interference from Washington, and Alaska should be given a directing voice in Washington in the bureau dealing with Alaskan affairs.

Merry-Go-Round Lure Holds Lad Two Days

FRANK WHITE

The merry-go-round at Broad Ripple Park proved such a lure that Frank White, 7, son of Mr. and Mrs. James White, 4026 Sutherland Ave., stayed near it from Sunday to Tuesday afternoon, causing his frantic parents to enlist police in the search for him. He came home late Tuesday.

There are still other gubernatorial booms, but they are "unofficial." They do not have the Taggart stamp of approval.

The boom of William H. O'Brien, Lawrenceburg, may die a booming. O'Brien's friends have been attempting to get the endorsement of Taggart. There have been meetings at French Lick and there have been meetings in Indianapolis. Nothing doing. T. T. is for McCulloch. The doctor, say his friends, sacrificed his time and his energy and his money on the altar of Democracy in 1920 when he did not have a chance. Now that things are different he should be rewarded, they say.

From the wilds of Madison County is being heard the first faint roar of another boom, and like the O'Brien movement, it comes from an old "wheel horse." The investigators, or perhaps the victim, of this movement, is Dale Crittendenberger, editor of the Anderson Bulletin, former Auditor of State, member of the State committee, and Democratic politician from away back.

His friends also have been bidding for the Taggart support. It is reported they are having exactly as much luck as the O'Brien backers.

Meanwhile, Dr. McCulloch is saying nothing and Taggart is preparing to show the folk who he boss.

Wheat Harvesting Practically Completed.

Varying yields of wheat throughout northern Indiana in which thrashing is progressing steadily is reported by George C. Bryant, agricultural statistician for Indiana. Harvesting of the crop is practically completed in all parts of the State, while some oats and barley have been cut in southern counties.

Hay crops, according to the report, are being harvested, but nearly all fields are weedy and the quality has suffered as a consequence. Yields generally are light, with the exception of alfalfa. Pastures are reported to be in good condition.

Weather conditions were favorable to all truck crops during the first two weeks of the month, potatoes and tall fruits especially being above the average. Early apples are on the market. Livestock is generally in good condition except for scattering cases of hog cholera.

Harvest hands are none too plentiful, but no serious shortage has been reported. Temperatures for the first half of the month averaged about normal, with showers frequent in most localities, but no damage of consequence resulting.

OWSLEY'S STAY SHORT
Alvin Owsley, national commander of the American Legion, is in Indianapolis today after visiting forty-five States. He will leave Sunday for Chocoma, Wyo., to speak. Then he will go to State conventions in Utah and Nevada.

Owsley reports that the public is heartily in favor of the program laid down by the Legion.

"Although the Legion is not in politics, many legislators are holding prominent offices," he said.

Prowler Gets Away
Mrs. M. E. Hackett, 1733 N. Talbott ave., heard a prowler attempt to remove a screen from a window of her home at 10:45 p. m. Tuesday. She telephoned police, but the prowler disappeared before the emergency squad arrived.

M'CULLOCH TO BE TAGGART MAN IN DEMOCRATIC RACE

Visit of State Leader to City Gives Rise to Definite Reports.
Democratic campaign plans for Indiana were taking definite shape today with another visit of Thomas Taggart to Indianapolis. One of the results of present activities is expected to be an announcement before many weeks of the candidacy of Dr. Charles B. McCulloch for the nomination for Governor. McCulloch will be the Taggart candidate. This fact is as definitely settled as anything political can be. McCulloch wants the nomination and Taggart is going to see that he gets it. If he does not get the nomination it will be because Taggart has less influence on the party than he has had in previous years. Taggart is not talking politics for publication. He is going to let others do that when the time comes. But he is mighty active. There are still other gubernatorial booms, but they are "unofficial." They do not have the Taggart stamp of approval.

High hopes were entertained in the Baldwin government would in some way or another not definitely put an end to the deadlock of the Ruhr and reparations situations. Such hopes never had any foundation in fact and never can have as long as the French people support Poincare's policy.

By LORD BEAVERBROOK
(Copyright, 1923, by United Press)
LONDON, July 18.—Premier Poincare of France has anticipated Premier Baldwin's proposed reparations note by a speech at Senlis in which he declares without reservations or evasions France has come to the end of all concessions she is prepared to make.

He is emphatic in his determination not to go back one inch from the Ruhr occupation policy and all it implies, and he sees no hope of settlement by other means. He lays stress in his belief of Britain's honesty of purpose and expresses "grief at the thought that differences over this momentous question of reparations cost even a shadow of Anglo-French friendship, but in the end he is firm in his purpose.

No Foundation for Hopes
High hopes were entertained in the Baldwin government would in some way or another not definitely put an end to the deadlock of the Ruhr and reparations situations. Such hopes never had any foundation in fact and never can have as long as the French people support Poincare's policy.

For this ferment of expectation the government itself is largely responsible by suggesting that Baldwin might succeed in bringing France around where Bonar Law failed, whereas in reality, as the Daily Express pointed out at the time, his only contribution to this subject was a "new brand of optimism."

Mustn't Blame Nation
Having set this note for themselves, the ministers must not blame the country if it exhibits some disappointment now Poincare's speech has ended the high hopes of the nation.

The reception of the British note is now a foregone conclusion and France will reply in a week from now she intends proceeding against Germany in the future exactly as in the past.

Britain has two alternative courses before her. First she can submit to the French action which will make the French note action with its loud press talk of retaking the lead in Europe once more look rather ridiculous and humiliating. Second she can definitely break with France and conclude what must finally end in an economic alliance with Germany against a former ally.

This last proposition has only to be stated nakedly for all men to see how impossible it would look to British public opinion—at least for many years to come.

Foreign Policy Bankrupt
If then these were the only alternative courses the British foreign policy would seem to be in a bad way, in fact, practically bankrupt.

I, however, believe there is a third and wiser plan open to British statesmen whereby we need not quarrel with nor be subservient to France nor yet ally ourselves with Germany.

It is to clear out of Europe and while taking what we can get from European markets devote our surplus energy to the peaceful development of the British empire.

France thinks she can successfully settle her account with Germany by her own methods.

Let her see to it.

THIRD PARTY IS FEARED
Progressives Believe California Senator Would Head Off Move.

By United Press
WASHINGTON, July 18.—A new presidential boom for Hiram Johnson as the compromise candidate between Mr. Harding and Senator La Follette was being built today upon the wreckage of the Republican defeat in Minnesota.

Johnson's friends are not the only ones behind the boom. Some standard leaders were discussing him seriously for the Republican nomination to head off a third party move by La Follette.

While there is no apparent basis for assumption that a third party as to be a certainty there is no doubt that Republican leaders are giving this possibility close and serious attention.

PIONEER'S DEATH RECALLS DAYS OF EARLY STRUGGLES

Frank Seehofer, 91, Dies—Helped Clear Land for City.

A pioneer who helped clear much of the land upon which Indianapolis stands passed out of the city's history today when Frank Seehofer, 91, died at the residence of his nephew, Joseph Seehofer, 467 Virginia Ave.

Mr. Seehofer was born in Donzdorf, Germany, in 1832 and came to Indianapolis when he was 18 years old. The city then had a population of 3,000.

In addition to clearing land, Mr. Seehofer helped many early settlers build homes. One of these still is standing in S. Meridian St.

A cabinet maker, Mr. Seehofer was employed by the Spiegel & Thomas Furniture factory for many years.

Funeral will be held at the nephew's residence at 2 p. m. Thursday, with burial in Crown Hill cemetery.
