PRESIDENT COOLIDGE AND WIFE WORSHIP

Chief Executive Attends First Congregational Church at Memorial Service for Warren G. Harding.

United Press
WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—President Coolidge went to church Sunday as he has done regularly since he was a boy on a bare farm in Vermont, but he attended for the first time as chief executive of the United States.

The occasion was significant and impressive—and surrounded with a certain sadness, as another President was remembered.

A crowd of people gathered outside of the new Willard Hotel to watch President Coolidge and his wife, and their friends, Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Stearns, step into the White House car which carried them to their first Congregational Church.

A quota of secret service men, who followed, created an official atmosphere for by-standers who have not yet fully realized the elevation of the unassuming Vice President.

Wears High Silk Hat

The President wore a high silk hat, and his Prince Albert was set off by a black and white striped tie. Mrs. Coolidge looked comfortable in a light summer dress, a pale blue with dark figures. She wore a black satin hat, semi-picture style, and purple shoes.

The crowd about the door made way for them, and they were shown to their seats in front of the church amid a strained silence—the organ had stopped just before their entrance. People packed into every pew halted their nervous fanning to watch the couple go down the aisle, but resumed again, for it was stifling hot, and no breeze stirred through the windows from the sultry outside.

Throughout the services there was the all shadowing pal of grief for the President who is dead.

Under the unexpected chain of sad circumstances, it seems strange that this was "community Sunday," the preacher, Jason Noble Pierce, said, opening his sermon.

"We are gathered to commemorate the communion, remembering the Christ who died, a broken heart, a solace to his task."

There was a deep silence in the church. A street car clanged by outside. President and Mrs. Coolidge listened attentively.

Meet at Lord's Table

"We meet here at the Lord's table, remembering as we gather about it a train from the Pacific Coast is bearing to us all that is mortal of him who a few hours ago was our chief magistrate."

"Our heart is bowed down with grief for the wife, the companion, the lover—"

"A few days ago," he said, in the course of his sermon, "you could find men who would have criticized any President, but with what has come all the heart of America is filled with sympathy and with love, bowed in sorrow with a great compassion."

Love is here, a love that won't fail Mrs. Harding; that won't fail the aged father, sisters—a love that won't fail our new President and America."

In the prayer, which preceded the communion service, Dr. Pierce called on God to guide the country "in this time of National sorrow and distress."

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—"Silent Cal" Coolidge probably will not be so silent, now that he is President of the United States.

While not too much is known about the President's views on public matters, there is one matter about which there is no doubt. That is his popular nickname, "Silent Cal." The President hates that monicker.

Speeding New President

ALL RETLUND, VT., JOINED IN BIDDING GODSPEED TO CALVIN COOLIDGE WHEN HE STARTED FOR WASHINGTON TO ASSUME THE DUTIES OF PRESIDENT. THIS LITTLE CHAP WILL SOME DAY TELL HIS GRANDCHILDREN ABOUT THIS, HIS SUPREME MOMENT.

'Good Old Days' Described by One Who Lived in Them

Waiting on an up-town corner for a street car stood a rotund, stocky man with rapidly graying hair. An automobile spun down the street, the driver back for the little man and the car whirled away.

With rather a whimsical light in his kindly eyes, the man said: "Things change, don't they? In the old days, that would have been a horse and buggy and my friend wouldn't have thought of passing me without stopping and demanding that I ride down town."

The little man gazed down the street after the receding auto and then: "But I don't care. It's safer on street cars."

This last was purely defiance of the encroaching order.

Confidence Gone
When he got on the street car he said: "And that incident rather symbolizes another thing that's changed—there is no such thing as confidence among people any more. I own a grocery over on — St. When I bought it in '84 I was a mere clerk but knowing that it could be bought for $600 I asked Bill Smith for the money. He gave me a check and refused to accept a note for it. When I went to pay him back he hesitated to accept even a per cent interest and made me take part of the $600 back for a reserve fund.

"Today you give your entire life history to your friends from whom you would borrow money, tell them what you are going to use it for, back it with equal collateral and then pay them 8 per cent.

Money Comes First
"I can't understand it—that is, the human side of it. Business must be protected, of course, yet it seems as though the whole world was centering every bit of its heart and interest in money."

The voice trailed off in rather an injured tone.

We hear our progressive, up-to-the-minute efficiency experts and business optimists asserting that "the good old days" never "were"; that they exist constantly, but that perspective makes them seem dearer. Perhaps this elderly man's attitude explains really why men refer to the "good old days," efficiency experts to the contrary notwithstanding.

Fourth Council Meeting Urged

Commissioners Want Money for Home.

A fourth meeting of the county council to appropriate $150,000 to build a colored orphan's home was urged on County Auditor Leo K. Fessler, who alone has the power to summon the body, by County Commissioners Hoffman and Kitley today.

Three times the council has met to consider the ordinance, and three times deferred action on the ground, members said, their board was "meant to be more than a mere rubber stamp."

"I don't see the use of calling a fourth meeting," said Fessler. "They'll just turn it down."

"Well, they should be put in the ligh' of either appropriating the money or turning it down flat," said the commissioners.

The commissioners failed to appear for a joint meeting of the bodies Saturday afternoon, at which the architect was to be chosen and other details decided. The commissioners and council are of different political factions.

Woman Frightens Prowler by Telephoning Police.

A would-be burglar ran when Clara Robbins, 1474 N. New Jersey St., went to the telephone to call police, she said today. The prowler was attempting to remove a screen from a window when Mrs. Robbins discovered him.

Habeas Corpus Asked

Petition for a writ of habeas corpus was filed against Sheriff George Snider in Superior Court today by attorneys for Robert R. Riddell, who said he is detained in the Marion County jail in place of another man. He is held on a warrant from Polk County, Ia., charging Riddell with obtaining money under false pretenses. Riddell says he is not Jones.
