

LIMIT POWER IN AIR, ADVICE OF AMERICAN LEGION

Another Conference Suggested to Check Move for New Power.

An international conference for the limitation of armament is proposed to remove the menace of the race in developing fighting planes now in progress among the great nations of the world, in the current number of the American Legion Weekly, official organ of the American Legion.

With the sea-power question solved by the Washington conference and the land-power problem disposed of by the reduction of armies in all countries, with the possible exceptions of France and Russia, the "fortification of the air, for offensive and defensive purposes, but chiefly the former—a problem which passed unnoticed in 1911—stands in 1923 as one of the principal causes of political anxiety which disturbs the tranquility of the world," the editorial states.

France takes the lead in developing a formidable air force, according to the Legion. "For a long time she built quietly, apparently unregarded by other nations," the editorial avers. "Then suddenly the world awakened to the fact that France had so armed the air as to render herself not only virtually impregnable from attack, but had constructed an offensive weapon more swift and terrible than anything yet known."

Taking counsel of their fears, Britain and Italy feverishly began voting staggering credits and constructing planes to meet the French "threat," Russia imports German mechanics and German machinery and talks of building 10,000 fighting planes," the editorial continues.

U. S. Must Take Heed
"The United States must do something. If the race is on, we must enter. So the experts in Washington begin to figure on what year's air appropriation will be popularize the idea with trans-continental flights and speculation on a trip by air around the world."

The Legion suggests that "There is a better way out" than by entering the armament race. It can be done, according to the editorial, by calling the disarmament conference. "One should be called. It should be called now. Delay complicates the situation and heightens the dangers to everybody."

Kate Douglas Wiggin Writes Story of Her Life for Early Fall Release

By WALTER D. HICKMAN.
"MY GARDEN OF MEMORY" is the sweet sounding title that Kate Douglas Wiggin has given to her autobiography.

Her story is announced as an October publication of Houghton-Mifflin Company. This woman occupies an unique and secure position in the field of American literature. To me she has always seemed to write from the heart out. Houghton-Mifflin Company, in making the announcement of the book in The Autumn Piper, states:

Her life has been singularly rich and happy. Born in Philadelphia, she lived throughout her girlhood in the midst of the peaceful beauty of rural New England, and at the age of 18 went to California and took up kindergarten work. She was already well known as a young educator of great ability and talent before "The Birds' Christmas Carol" was published, and with it came her sensational rise to popularity. The Penelope books, the two charming stories about Rebecca, Patsy, and Marm Lisa all helped to establish her position in American literature.

Here is the story of a singularly attractive life which unfolds, little by little, with great and varied charm, for the unflinching joy of the reader. All her life the author has been in close contact with many of the most interesting people in America and Great Britain, and she tells with rare charm innumerable anecdotes about people of interest.

Wright Turns Out Another 'Best Seller'

HAROLD BELL WRIGHT

With the publication of "The Mill With the Iron Door," by Harold Bell Wright, it is a safe guess that it will be another best seller. Wright has enough friends to assure any of his books a wide sale. It is published by Appleton.

One of the best contemporary one-act plays by such authors as Milne, John Drinkwater, Stuart Walker, the Quinters, Edward Knoblock, Kreyenborg, Edmond Rostand and Lady Gregory. Not only are they among the best plays of a literary point of view, but they are adaptable for the stage and suitable for amateurs.

This book undoubtedly will have wide appeal in Indianapolis, where Walker's plays have been received on the stage with so much delight.

What Indianapolis Is Buying in Books This Summer

What are the books in demand in Indianapolis this summer?

I mean the six books which are selling in the largest numbers?

To get at an answer I asked the head of the book department of L. S. Ayres & Company to furnish me with the list of the six best sellers at the present time.

The list is as follows:

"West of the Water Tower," Anonymous.

"The Black Oxen," by Gertrude Atherton.

"Flaming Youth," by H. G. Wells.

"Middle of the Road," by Philip Gibbs.

"Mr. and Mrs. Sen."

To meet the demand for new fiction the Indianapolis Public Library announces the following new books ready for circulation:

"Gates of Life," by E. A. Bjorkman; "The Riddle, and Other Tales," by W. J. De La Mare; "Voices, Birthmarks, The Elephant," by M. J. Holt; "House and Smith Square," "Fire and Ice," by J. V. Jensen; "Tomorrow About This Time," by Mrs. G. (L.) H. Lutz; "The Holy Tree," by Gerald O'Donovan; "Ironheart," by W. M. Raine; "Mostly Sally," by P. G. Wodehouse; "Mine With the Iron Door," by H. B. Wright; "Invisible Gods," by E. F. Wyatt.
