"Death and grief go hand in hand today," he said. "Hearts of the highest and lowest are stricken. Mere formal grief is not being expressed. It is deep-seated personal sorrow. He was typically American. He was basic; not reactionary. He voted for all constructive legislation. He condemned that which failed to measure up to his standard of honest, sound government."

A message was sent to Mrs. Harding. The Rev. J. Ambrose Dunkel opened the service with prayer.

MEMORIAL IS HELD BY WAR MOTHERS

Veterans and Allied Organizations Join in Extolling Memory at Propylaeum.

Representatives of the American Legion, the woman's auxiliary to the legion and the Service Star Legion attended services in memory of President Harding given at the Propylaeum this afternoon by the American War Mothers.

Among the speakers were Mrs. Martha Stubbs and the Rev. George S. Henninger, pastor of the E. Tenth Street M. E. Church.

"While we, with thousands more who love to call America home, are paying our final respects to the departed commander-in-chief of the American people," Mrs. Stubbs said, "his body rests near the spot where he was born, in his father's home in Marion, Ohio."

"Perhaps one of the greatest messages he has left to the world is his last, when he proclaimed with his pen, the merits of Christianity and the revelations of righteousness."

"Warren G. Harding has gone to the undiscovered country," the Rev. Mr. Henninger said. "Whether his journey thither was but one step across the imperceptible frontier, I do not know."

"Whether on that August morning after death he saw a more glorious sunrise above a celestial horizon or whether his strong and subtle energies found instant exercise in another form, whether his dexterous and disciplined facilities are now contending in a greater world than ours for supremacy, I do not know. But this I know, the sweet, patient, lovable spirit of Warren G. Harding in some world goes living on."

"Every man is the center of a circle whose fatal circumference he cannot pass. Within its narrow confines he is potential, beyond it he perishes; if immortality is a splendid but delusive dream, if the incompleteness of every career, even the longest and most fortunate, be not supplemented and perfected after its termination here, then he who dreads to die should fear to live, for life is a tragedy more desolate and inexplicable than death."

"But to the Christian the undiscovered country is as real as if the travelers of by-gone years had one by one returned with stories of its wondrous joys and beauties."

"To this land our beloved President has gone. Those of us with highly nervous temperaments can hardly understand the beautiful serenity of his life. He seemed to stand upon a plateau high above his fellows. I think that Warren Harding was the answer to Kipling's poem, 'If.' He seemed to be able to stand success and remain humble. He seemed to live like one with his head above the clouds, but with his feet firmly planted on the earth."

PENNSYLVANIA AVE. IS HISTORIC STREET

Broad Thoroughfare Has Seen Triumph and Tragedy, Death and Frolic.

By United Press

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Pennsylvania Ave., down which the body of Warren G. Harding was trundled en route to its last rest, has had an unparalleled history.

It has been the parade ground of victory, the highway of brave hopes, the concourse of carnivals, the boulevard of blasted ambitions and the avenue of death.

Up this long, broad thoroughfare, from the Capitol, Presidents have driven to the White House, exhilarated by high hopes in the achievement of the greatest honor at the disposition of the American people.

Up this avenue Lincoln and Grant headed victorious marching troops after the Civil War; it knew the tread of thousands of martial feet at the close of the Spanish American War;

Woodrow Wilson, dressed in white trousers and a blue coat, with jaunty step and carrying a tiny American flag, strode there at the head of American young men, drafted for service abroad.

Down this avenue, to the mournful beat of the funeral dirge, have moved the caissons, bearing the martyred Presidents, Lincoln, Garfield, McKinley and Harding. Down this avenue, too, have ridden William Howard Taft, in 1913, and the broken body of Woodrow Wilson, in 1921, each bearing a blasted ambition after a term in that high office each had held.

Within its curbs street fairs and carnivals, circus parades and dances have been held.

A long reel of memorable pictures—exhilaration and tragedy, fun and frolic, war and peace in the making—is this curiously interesting street.

He gave his name as Arthur Batley, 23, of 3007 Hovey St. In his possession, police said, they found a saved-off shotgun, a screw driver and a monkey wrench. He had a straw hat and a soft hat.

After much questioning, he said he had been motoring and his car ran out of gas at Thirty-Second St. and Broadway. The car was found. Police said it had no license plates or certificate of title. Batley was held under a $1,000 bond for investigation.

THREE WOUNDED AS STRIKERS AND SHERIFFS CLASH

Illinois Troops May Be Called to Settle Trouble at Smelting Plant.

By United Press

HILLSBORO, Ill., Aug. 9.—One union striker was shot and two deputy sheriffs were seriously wounded in a pitched battle between strikers and deputies at the plant of the American Zinc, Lead and Smelting Company today.

Officials of the company asked for troops, but Governor Small's office at Springfield sent Dan Dineen of Decatur, a department of labor mediator, to investigate the situation. It is believed the situation eases by tonight.

Trouble at the local plant started soon after the arrival of Edward Carhine, union organizer.

The local plant was operated on the open shop basis. The company refused to recognize the union and a strike was called Tuesday morning. Three hundred men walked out, but 306 remained at work.

Because of threatened violence, Sheriff Hill swore in twenty deputies. This morning one of the cars carrying men to work at the plant was stopped by strikers, who demanded the men cease work. One of the deputy sheriffs guarding the car is said to have drawn a gun and advised the strikers to get away from the car.
