IF you were not already convinced Indianapolis needs some new school buildings, the picture of the building at Market and Bloomington Sts., printed on the front page of The Times Saturday, should have convinced you.

School authorities and specialists have a habit of going into the hills of southern Indiana, picking out school buildings as horrible example, and talking about needed improvements. We doubt if there is a "horrible example" anywhere else in Indiana that compares with that building right here in Indianapolis.

Whether that structure will continue to be used for school purposes or whether a modern building will take its place will be determined at a hearing before the State board of tax commissioners at 9 a. m. Wednesday. The hearing will be in the Statehouse.

Fourteen persons, only one of whom has children of school age, are trying to delay the building program, trying to compel children to attend school in such shacks as shown in the picture.

Every citizen of Indianapolis who has the interest of the children at heart can help prevent those fourteen persons, who fear they will have to spend a few dollars more in taxes during the next thirty years, from blocking the school program. Let the tax board know what you think about such conditions.

WHY NOT REGULATE BOXING?

THAT Firpo fiasco at the Hoosier Motor Speedway the other night is just another argument for a State boxing commission and proper regulation of the sport.

The Indiana law prevents prize fighting. Under interpretations given the law almost anything is a prize fight. That law is violated repeatedly and only occasionally is an effort made to enforce it.

In case of the Firpo-Downey affair, officials attempted to go half way in enforcing the law. As a result, the whole performance was a joke. It resulted in everybody being made to look ridiculous and in the spectators becoming "sore," and just so.

In nearly every Legislature an effort is made to legalize boxing, or prize fighting if you would have it that way, under proper regulation. Every effort to pass such a bill has been blocked.

Would it not be better to have regulation than to permit the recurrence of such events as the Firpo-Downey affair?

EWALD O. STIEHM

"JUMBO" Stiehm is dead. This news brings sadness to the hearts of thousands of former students of Indiana University and to many more thousands of football fans.

A coach is a hero with university students and sport fans alike. He plays a big part in the life of a college or university. More often than not he "puts the school on the map."

Ewald O. Stiehm was popular with students, players and the public. His passing leaves a gap in the ranks of Indiana sportsmen.

DOLLAR MARKED JUSTICE

OVER at Lewisburg, mountain hamlet in West Virginia, a dead-locked jury again has failed to convict William Blizzard, a miner, for murder in connection with the armed march of the miners back in 1921.

So they will have another trial in another mountain hamlet and scores of witnesses will be brought in for a prolonged comedy of justice at tremendous cost to the taxpayers of West Virginia and to the United Mine Workers of America.

Oh, no, it is not just Blizzard who is on trial. If Blizzard were fighting alone, he would have been hustled off to prison long ago. But it happens that Blizzard has behind him the strength of the United Mine Workers, who by reason of their numbers can afford to hire legal talent, to bring witnesses to trials, and to see generally that Blizzard gets a square deal.

These trials, which drag on year after year in West Virginia, are not to mete out justice at all. They are the battle grounds between the coal mine operators, who run West Virginia, and the miners' union. Their object is to exhaust the funds of the United Mine Workers. It costs much money to hire lawyers and transport witnesses to trials.

This is a happy means of fighting the unions, from the operators' point of view. The operators' lawyers are used by the prosecution. They are on the State's pay roll. The operators' witnesses are produced at State expense, because theoretically the State is supposed to prosecute all murderers.

So all the operators had to do was convince the State officials that Blizzard was a criminal. That was easy, in view of the fact that the operators run the State. Repeatedly, the States' operators' attorneys have failed to convict Blizzard, but just as often and once offender the States' operators' attorneys trumped up new charges, brought new trials in new and hard-to-reach villages, and the mockery of justice went on. It will go on as long as the United Mine Workers' money holds out. The miners say that will be until the operators give up their attempt to jail union men.

Thus West Virginia does out her dollar marked justice.

U. S. SHIPS ARE LOSING TRADE LEAD

Both Private Owned and Shipping Board Vessels Show Decrease.

By JOHN CARSON, Times Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—American ships are rapidly losing business as compared with foreign ships, despite the reports of "progress" from the Shipping Board. During the first four months of this year, according to the figures of the Department of Commerce, the comparative business was as follows:

Loss 99,000 Tons

Shipping Board vessels carried overseas trade 2,705,000 tons in January, February, March and April of this year as compared with 2,804,000 tons in the same four months of last year. The loss was 99,000 tons or 4 per cent.

Privately owned American vessels carried 748,000 tons as compared with 746,000 tons last year, a loss of 198,000 tons or 21 per cent.

British ships carried 4,739,000 tons as compared with 4,922,000 tons last year, an increase of 772,000 tons or 19 per cent.

Other foreign ships carried 5,054,000 tons as compared with 5,930,000 tons last year, an increase of 1,124,000 tons, or 28 per cent.

Foreign Shows Increase

The figures show that while 1,604,000 tons more of cargo were offered this year, American vessels carried 297,000 tons less than last year and foreign vessels captured all the increased business and the American losses also, making a net gain for the foreign vessels of 1,901,000 tons.

In the year 1920, American vessels carried 43 per cent of the overseas business; in 1921, only 35.67 per cent; in 1922, 36.23 per cent, and in January, 36.13 per cent; February, 34.92 per cent; March, 32.50 per cent, and April 31.48 per cent.

Animal Facts

All five of the Pacific salmon species live until the first spawning period, which is four to seven years. The cod is long-lived, sometimes reaching an age of 55 years or thereabouts. In the New York aquarium there are striped bass 30 years old, whitefish 10 years, large-mouth bass 11 years, muskellunge, calico bass, rock bass and yellow perch 10 years. One striped bass, kept in captivity for nineteen years, weighed twenty pounds and was three feet in length at death. It was six inches long when captured.

Guy Tibbles, the bald eagle expert at Port Clinton, O., is quoted in Field and Stream regarding one visit he made to an eagle's nest. He found seven steel traps in the nest. The traps had been set for muskrats and caught them. Then the eagles grabbed both traps and muskrats and carried them to the nest where the dead animals were speedily eaten. The traps were left in the nest as souvenirs. Guy also says that the female eagle hatches three babies, but only one of the latter ever leaves the nest, a case of the survival of the fittest and fittestest. The first born, you see, has such a voracious appetite that he dines on the other two as they come from the eggs.

Generosity

Ernest L. Sawyer advertises in the London Daily Express: "On the day it is proved that the grafting of an eye can be performed with a reasonable certainty of success, I shall be willing freely to share my gift of sight with any poor English man, woman or child, who is blind, whose circumstances can be vouched for, and the advisability of whose case is recommended by a responsible authority." There is always hope for a world that has generous humanitarians like Sawyer, forerunners of a day when the brotherhood of man will be so worldwide that generosity like the gift of an eye to an unfortunate fellow man will be customary.

Life is never any more miserable than humanity makes it.

Speeders

Sweden, determined to check auto speeders, passes a national law making it compulsory for all autos to be equipped with speedometers that will make a record showing how fast the car has been run. No arguments with the traffic cop then.

Unfortunately, after passing the law, the Swedish Riksdag discovers no such speedometer has been invented.

We'll have such devices in America eventually. Also, as autos approach the saturation point, we'll have to gear cars down so it will be impossible to run them more than, say, twenty miles an hour.

Gold

Ancient alchemists sought a method to create gold from cheaper substances, especially lead. Modern alchemists seek to destroy gold, says Dr. Paul D. Foote, government scientist, because one gram of gold destroyed by transformation into electrical energy would be worth $2,600,000 at the present price of electricity.

The chief goal of modern science is how to release the energy locked up in the atom. The discovery will be made some day. Political revolutions fire our imagination, but the greatest of all revolutions is the industrial one that is taking place in our generation.

Dollar

The dollar is worth only 65 cents now, on the 1913 basis, says Prof. Irving Fisher. He means that $1 now will, on the average, buy only 65 cents worth of goods in 1913.

But the situation is almost identical the same when it comes to retail prices—cost of living.

This is a sad blow to the man who saved dollars in 1913 and now finds them worth only 65 cents apiece. But there is no getting discouraged. For the rule is beginning to work in the opposite direction—the 65 cents saved today will be worth $1 later, in buying power. You'll realize this, in full, about 1950. Far off? It'll be here before you realize—and it'll come when most of us will need the money more than at any time in life.

Huh," answered his questioner, "that sounds silly in a man of your intelligence. Suppose that your grandfather, father, uncle and such had been burgars, horse thieves, bootleggers, what would you be?"

"A Republican," replied old Jim quietly.

LOCOMOTIVE MOVES FAST IN ENGLAND

Through Trains Average 50 Miles an Hour—Departure Is Ceremony.

By JOHN W. RAPER

IN ENGLAND—the railways have for their own use and for the carrying of structural iron coal cars and flats of 30-ton capacity. You don't see many of them. Most of the freight cars are of 10 or 12 ton capacity.

Short hauls and shipments in small quantities are responsible for the small freight cars. Undoubtedly this aids in dispatch. English shippers with whom I have talked make no complaints of car shortage or delays.

Nearly all Americans say the English trains are slow. I can't see it. Through trains average just a trifle less than fifty miles an hour. A trip of any length on a local train consumes considerable time, but that is because many stops are made. Between stations they run extremely fast.

A locomotive here is not equipped with a bell. It isn't necessary, as grade crossings are about as rare as hen's teeth. I have seen only three in Great Britain. They were provided with heavy picket gates and kept securely locked. Anybody who wished to cross the tracks with a team or motor car had to go to the station and notify the station master, who would unlock the gate and open it.

Women are still employed in cleaning both passenger coaches and locomotives. Girls run the station lunch counters—no stools for the patron, he stands up—and girls operate wagons which they push up and down the platforms. The station restaurants and lunch counters are clean and the food good.

I have never witnessed the coronation of a king nor the inauguration of a president. But I once saw the "opening" of an old-fashioned American saloon. I was among those present on the far side of the crowd when Harry Davis was inaugurated governor of Ohio.

And I have seen the Caledonian Railway's Edinburgh express depart from the Glasgow station. The spectacle more than made up for missing a coronation.

Next: Betting is a mania over there, Raper discovers, watching men and women of all ranks gamble on race horses.

What Editors Are Saying

Magnus

We notice that some of the Republican papers are ridiculing the election of Magnus Johnson as United States Senator from Indiana. Senator Johnson is a man of no special note, and is nothing but a "dirt farmer." He was elected by 60,000 majority over the Republican candidate. President Coolidge was taken from the farm to become Governor of Massachusetts, although he had been in politics for many years. Senator Johnson may be a joke, but when he joins with Senators H. Johnson, La Follette, Borah and other progressive Republicans in the Senate, it will be no big laugh for the standpatters.

How Terrible!

Both Mary Pickford and Norma Talmadge, it is said, are to tackle "Juliet" on the screen. Somebody should choke the movie directors in charge before they give the Shakespearean masterpiece the conventional motion picture "happy ending." The hurling eustard pie also ought to be barred from these productions if at all possible.

Supposing

(Tipton Times)

Tax exempt bonds are issued by cities, counties, States and nation. The holder of these bonds pays no taxes on the income derived therefrom.

Bill Jones, whose income results from his labor and investments in industries, pays every known form of taxation, and he pays considerably more than is just in order to make up for amounts lost to the Government through "tax exempt" incomes.

Supposing everybody tried to get tax exempt bonds, where would the money come from to run the Government?

The continued issuance of tax exempt bonds drains away from productive enterprise and increases the tax burden on all those who do not hold the bonds.

Flood

Again comes a warning, this time from National Industrial Conference Board, that the indebtedness of our State and local governments is becoming perilously large.

Ten years ago the combined debt of our States and municipalities was only $3,850,000,000. Now it is $10,000,000,000. That's nearly as much as our national debt, after subtracting from it what is owed to us by foreign governments.

Getting the Range at Last

The Advance Guard

By BERTON BRALEY

They fret and fume at the humdrum round of sleep and food and toil. They loaf and shirk at routine work which hasn't a hope of change. But given the lure of a gambler's chance at copper or gold or oil. They'll wager the last red cent they own, they'll wager their strength and health.

On finding gold at the rainbow's end, or oil in the desert's heart, They'll sweat and starve and toil like fiends for a will-o'-the-wisp of wealth Which dances ever before their eyes to lead them over the chart!

Some of them win, but most of them lose, and wearily beat it back, Shabby and broke, to the home-kept folk, who look at these "tramps" askance.

But as soon as the rovers get a stake they're off on another track, Slaves of glamor that draws them on, and bondsmen of Romance. Though fame and fortune may wait at home, they care for these not at all. Their veins are filled with a restless flood that drives them on afar. For they are bound in a mightier spell and held in a greater thrall. And ever they struggle further on to the light of a distant star!

Gamblers, rovers, adventurers all, who dream it is wealth they seek, Though it is only the wander-fret that drives them on their way. For, if by chance, their well comes in, or they strike a paying streak, They're off again to a newer field where the game is still to play! Quoting ever a gambler's thrill they flee from the towns of men, And the pusher comes on the trail they break—and pushes them on again. For civilization goes the heels of a highly uncivilized crew! Family Fun

Holston's Choice for Them

"A good wife is beyond price," snapped Mrs. Grouch during the argument. "That's the reason a poor man gets the kind he does, I suppose," retorted her husband meaningfully.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

It Might 'a Been!

Gee, we wish the old serpent had said to Eve when she was shopping around for something new in the way of fruit: "Yes, we have no apples today!"—Ohio State Journal.

Still at It.

First Doughboy—The profiteers sure heard the command "Charge!" during the war. Second Doughboy—Yes, but they were deaf as a post when "Retreat" was sounded.

"May Best Man Win"

Now being mentioned for the Republican presidential nomination are President Calvin Coolidge, ex-Secretary of State Charles E. Hughes, Secretary of Navy Denby, Senator H. Johnson, Governor Gifford Pinchot, Senator Borah, Senator McCormick, Governor Allen of Kansas, ex-Governor Miller of New York, Senator Jim Watson of Indiana and Senator Wacaworth of New York. There may be others.

"May the best man win" always was a more or less empty vociferation. Never was it so much as now.

Puzzle

Half the farmers made less than $1,000 last year, claims Nathan Straus Jr., agricultural expert of the New York State Senate. Such figures are confusing. Do they represent clear profit? If so (and probably not), the farmers, in addition, got their living. Few city workers have $1,000 clear after paying for food, etc.

On the other hand, in New Jersey, 399 school pupils in one year cleared nearly $70,000 above all expenses, from their home gardens. That's $175 apiece and in spare time. They had, of course, no investment in land, no notes at bank, no taxes.

Intensive farming and diversified crops may be the solution for many farmers, especially ones who stake everything on one crop. The cotton grower finally is learning this.

Fish

It's not true that fish is a brain food, claims a writer in Journal of American Medical Association.

Fish, however, is easily digested and a great builder of strength. We should eat more of it—and would if fish on the average were fresher when they reached our kitchens.

As for real brain food, nothing in particular has been discovered, except that the brain functions best when we are physically in good shape.

In this sense, any healthful food is "brain food." Endocrine glandularities are beginning to believe that thought has a close connection with a form of iodine, the poison which is manufactured "in combination" by the thyroid gland in the neck.

Coolidge Names

Here's the real story of the Coolidge names. The President was named John Calvin Coolidge by his father, who is also John Calvin Coolidge.

But, like Woodrow Wilson, who was christened Thomas Woodrow Wilson, "Cal" later chose to drop the first name and became known as plain Calvin Coolidge.

Calvin Coolidge's two sons divided the names between them. The first son was named John, the second Calvin. So both Coolidge youngsters are juniors, though only the younger writes his name that way on the hotel register.

Danger

A schoolhouse burns down every day in America, on the average, warns Dr. George Drayton Strayer. Luckily, most of the fires are at night.

In educating children, we neglect the important item of teaching them the dangers of fires, how to extinguish fires and how to escape when trapped in one. This form of education should begin in the home. Drill into your children's minds that fire is the most perilous force harnessed by man.

Down

How about prices? Wall Street Journal prints an article with this headline: "Wheat and cotton prices off 30 per cent, rubber 27 per cent, from March."

It lists other articles, showing a price drop of 20 per cent on the average—a fifth. Wholesale prices, of course, but retail prices eventually will respond to them.

A basic natural law: "What goes up must come down." As true of prices as of water thrown in air by jesting lads.

Applied

A giant camera is being installed at Yerbaniz, Mexico, to check up the Einstein theory. Many wonder what good will it do. If the theory is proved either true or false?

An answer to this comes from the Smithsonian Institution, which reports
