TO AVOID FAT NECK YOU SHOULD IMITATE SWAN

This is the second of a series of Beauty Exercises, written by Anne Dolan, noted New York physical culture expert, to help you retain your youth and beauty.

BY ANNE DOLAN

ONE of the saddest sights a woman ever sees is the advent of her second chin. Nothing warns the world quite so effectively that youth is on the wane.

To be sure, youth does wane, but why tell the world? Let that be your own little secret.

When it comes to the matter of double chins, heavy jaws and fat necks, an ounce of prevention is worth pounds of cure.

A little daily care will keep these destroyers of beauty away, but only the most stern and unflinching industry will get rid of them once they have been allowed to start.

The swan's neck is the standard of beauty, according to poets and sculptors. All right, let's study the swan. He exercises his neck constantly, during his head in and out and around with marvelous grace.

Now just imagine for a little while that you are a swan. With your shoulders erect, push your head out as far as you can straight ahead of you.

You won't make a particularly entrancing picture as you do so and you won't deceive any stranger that you are a swan, but you will exercise the muscles that make for swan-like beauty.

Then try this: Let your head drop as far over your spinal column as it will, letting your mouth fly open as used in the appointments. Yellow tapers in crystal holders tied with yellow tulle lighted the table. The centerpiece was of yellow and white garden flowers. The covers were marked by little kewpie dolls dressed in yellow tulle for the young women and address books for the young men.

Covers were laid for the hostess and her daughter and Mr. and Mrs. William E. Hart. Miss Hope Sherman, Miss Henrietta Reagan and David Batcheler, Maurice Tull, Russell Cook and Owen Fleming.

The Prospect Auxiliary, O. E. S., will give a lawn card party, postponed from Tuesday evening, Thursday evening, at the home of Mrs. Anna Klingensmith, 1131 Woodlawn Ave. There will be euchre, five hundred and pinocle.

LaVelle Gosset Post, American Legion Auxiliary, will have a card party Thursday evening at 902 N. Pershing Ave.

The Jolly Club of the Maccabees will give a euchre party at the home of Mrs. Hannah Means, 20 W. Twenty-Second St., Friday evening.

Mrs. Alex Goodwin, 2221 Ashland Ave., will entertain the LaCinda Dramatic Club Thursday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Holmes, 3046 N. Delaware St., returned Tuesday from Lake Maxinkuckee, where they spent the weekend.

The Ladies Society to the Brotherhood of L. F. E. will give a card party Thursday afternoon and evening at the hall, English Ave. and Shelby St.

The Only Euchre Club will give a card party at Musicians Hall on Thursday afternoon.

The Wednesday Needle Club of the Myrtle Temple No. 7, Pythian Sisters, had a half-day meeting today with Mrs. Jean King, 1714 Barth Ave.

The Golden Rule Lodge No. 1, I. O. O. F., will have a dance tonight at the P. H. C. Hall, East and Michigan Streets.

The Marion county chapter of the American War Mothers will hold its regular meeting at headquarters in the old Proprietary building, 16 E. North St., Thursday afternoon. Delegates to national convention, Kansas City, Sept. 29-Oct. 5, will be elected. Mrs. Mae Hahn will preside.

TWO STEPS IN THE "SWAN EXERCISE" TO BEAUTIFY CHIN AND NECK.

it will be inclined to do. Then come back to normal position. Do this several times.

Then, letting your head be a perfectly dead weight, describe a circle with it slowly. Do this half a dozen times or more.

For a double chin, here's an effective exercise. Just pucker up your lips as if you were going to whistle and instead blow an imaginary feather off your lips. You can do this many times a day, to your advantage.

These exercises will keep your neck relaxed, and if your cords or muscles are inclined to be stringy or unduly prominent they will correct that, too. Remember, a double chin is quite as much a matter of incorrect position of your head as it is of fat. Keep your head up, poised firmly on your neck and the flesh won't sag.

NEXT—Miss Dolan tells how to reduce superfluous flesh about arms and shoulders.

Sister Mary's KITCHEN

SMOKED AND SALT FISH

DURING the summer months fresh meats call for used in excess. Salted and smoked meats were prepared years ago especially for hot weather meals and meant much when other meat was not available.

Salted and smoked fish fills quite the same part in the diet, adding variety for persons not dependent on "preserved" foods.

And salted fish has a thirst-provoking tang very beneficial to heated bodies.

Salt fish calls to mind salt codfish that we may "detest," or maybe salt mackerel that was so salty we thought we'd "drink the mill-pond dry" before we were over the disaster of the dinner.

But in truth, all sorts of delicacies are prepared from these homely salt products. Many of the clever and intriguing hors d'oeuvres that are so expensive in fashionable restaurants gain their piquancy by means of a plebeian salted or smoked fish.

Smoked Herring Canapes

Four tablespoons minced herring, 2 hard boiled eggs, 4 slices tomato, 4 rounds of toast, mayonnaise, parsley.

Choose the small boneless variety of herring. Pour over boiling water and let stand five minutes. Drain and work smooth with a fork, adding olive oil and 2 teaspoons lemon juice to make moist enough to spread.

Cut the toast in rounds about one-fourth inch larger than the tomato slices. Spread with the herring. Cover with a slice of tomato. In the center of the tomato cut out a small place to hold half of a hard boiled egg white. Fill this with mayonnaise.

Rub yolks of eggs through a coarse sieve or ricer and sprinkle on the toast around the tomato. Sprinkle minced parsley lightly over the whole and serve on tiny paper doilies on small plates. This rule is for four canapes. The smoked herring is very piquant and will answer quite as well as much more expensive anchovy paste.

One Salt Mackerel

One salt mackerel, two tablespoons butter, one lemon, paprika, parsley.

Put the fish in a large pan and cover with cold water. The more water the better. Put flesh side down and use a rack if possible to allow the salt to settle to the bottom of the pan away from the fish. Change the water frequently and let freshen for twenty-four hours. Drain and wipe dry. Oil the bars of the broiler well with oil or unsalted dripping. The salt in butter makes the fish stick.

Broil the flesh side first. Brown lightly. Turn and broil the skin side. Rinse quickly in boiling water. Put on a hot platter, spread with butter and garnish with sections of lemon and sprigs of parsley. Sprinkle with paprika after spreading with butter.

A "left-over" of broiled mackerel makes a delicious touch in a tomato salad or can be served on toast with scrambled eggs.

Raisin-Cheese Sandwich

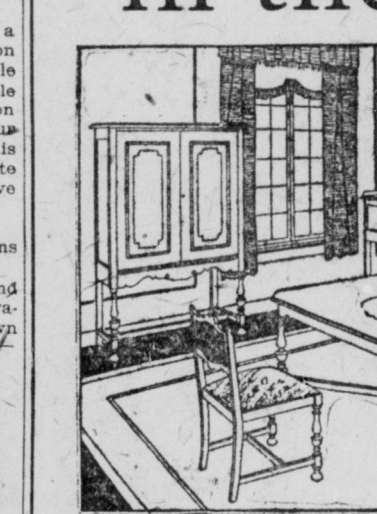

Mix chopped seeded raisins with cottage cheese and place between lettuce leaves between slices of bread to make a delicious and easily digested sandwich.

Rinse the Dishes

Rinsing the dishes before washing will keep the dish water properly clean.

When Parents Disagree, Child 'Patient' Suffers

What happens to the patient "when doctors disagree" is common knowledge.

So, too, it is with children and parents. The father and mother are the doctors of the child's soul.

In the case of physicians, when they disagree, consultations are held and some definite course of treatment is decided upon. Usually one particular person is put in charge.

Too often, when parents' views differ, instead of agreeing on a plan of action, they go ahead in different paths, giving conflicting orders and conflicting ideas to the "patient." And then they wonder why it is so hard to make Dorothy or Allen or Genevieve behave!

Parents Differ

Dear Miss Lee: I am 15 years old. There are three nice boys in our community who have asked me to go to the show or let them come to my house. I have to refuse, because my father does not allow me to keep company with any one. He does not want me to go to the show or be out with them any time.

My mother tells him I don't keep company and will not for a while yet, but she does not see any reason why I should not go to the show with them once in a while. He won't listen. He tells her I don't have to be with them at all. When I go out with a fellow I always tell mother where I am going, when I come home, I tell her all I did and what a good time I had. I would tell father, but I am afraid to.

Father and I sometimes have a little quarrel about my being with any one. I always tell him the truth. Please tell how I can get my father to let me go out with my boy friends once in a while.

UNOVERTEN BOBBY

My boy friends only 15, Bobby. Your father thinks that is too young for you to go to shows with boys. Why quarrel with him about it? You have plenty of time for that sort of thing in a few years.

Haughty Girl

Dear Martha Lee: I am in love with a beautiful girl, 17 years old. She has only one fault—she has a haughty disposition. Last evening she told me she was not going with me any more. She said I was "stingy" so often. Please advise me. I was going with another fellow a while.

One night, in the show, I heard her conversing with another fellow and it did not make you like him less. Also, show him that it is more of a compliment to him that you should like him best of many friends, than it would be if you liked him because he was your only man friend.

Know Thyself

By DR. CLIFFORD C. ROBINSON

YOUR FEET

A pair of tired feet is most discouraging. But with a little effort you can reduce this inconvenience to a minimum.

A daily foot bath is of great help. Use lukewarm water and soap. A gentle massage is beneficial. After bathing use cold water.

Change hosiery daily. Tight supporters impede circulation and should be avoided. Wear shoes that are large enough to be comfortable.

If you will give the feet a little exercise (your feet work hard all day long) you will notice a great improvement. While spraying them with cold water, move them up and down and sideways. Wiggle your toes.

If your feet want to perspire—let them. Use a boric acid solution or any mild germicide for any foot odor. The odor is caused by the development of bacteria, which easily succumb to a germicidal lotion.

People who are flat-footed and those who have bunions require the special services of a competent orthopedist. Bunions are caused usually by tight shoes. Flat feet are sort of a natural tendency in some individuals, but there are other causes.

You will notice there has been no mention of corns. There's a reason. Take care of your feet and you will have no corns.

Martha Lee Says

Only one fault? She is greedy (her statement about your "stinginess" proves that.) She is not well-bred (or she would not have talked so loudly in a theater.) And she must have numerous faults, or she would not say you "know her too well." Don't put her up on a pedestal. Don't take your "puppy love" seriously.

Tell the girl about the conversation in the theater. Also, tell her how you feel about her "haughty disposition." Then keep away from her until she changes.

Green-Eyed Monster

Dear Miss Lee: I go with a boy whom I love dearly enough, marry. He told me he loves me. But he gets jealous if I talk to other fellows or even mention their names.

I see him every night and sometimes through the day. Do you think that is too often to see him? Do you think he will soon tire of me if I keep seeing him so often? Please advise me. POLLY.

Married men see their wives more often than this man sees you, and are not supposed to tire of them; so, if the man really loves you, I don't see why he should. However, as long as you are not engaged, I think it would be just as well for you to see him a little less often.

You certainly should cure him of this jealousy, and soon. Let him see that it does not make you like him any more; that, if anything, it might make you like him less. Also, show him that it is more of a compliment to him that you should like him best of many friends, than it would be if you liked him because he was your only man friend.

LETTER FROM JOHN ALDEN PRESCOTT TO SYDNEY CARTON

DEAR SYD:

I only had a moment to catch the train after receiving Leslie's telegram that her parents had been called back to Pittsburgh and had left her alone. I knew that you had three or four days longer in New York, and as I could not possibly stay that long, decided to make a run for it, as you may have surmised when you received my note left at the hotel for you.

I wonder if you can conceive just what I did the first thing when I arrived home? Of course it was after I had kissed my wife and talked with her a little. Syd, she is the sweetest woman on earth.

Then she insisted that I should go into the room across the hall which has been turned into a nursery for Junior, and bring the baby to her. My knees fairly trembled as I tried to open the door. I had never thought for a moment of any such disclosure as you made to me.

Baby Opened Eyes

When I looked into the cradle and the baby opened his eyes, instantly I saw that wrinkling of his nose as he drew up the corner of his mouth, and I was almost sure your deductions were correct.

And the queer part of it, Syd, is that I don't know whether I want to believe it or not. I do not know whether I am pleased or not. You said, of course, that Paula told you she intended to keep her baby, but I expect a woman with a child out in Hollywood would be apt to find no place into which she would fit.

I presume that Paula, reading the newspapers in Albany before she left for the coast—I have heard, lately, Syd, that she was in Albany for a day or two about the time of Leslie's accident—had one of her impulses to give the baby to Leslie and me. And yet I am such a coward, Syd, I do not want to make sure that this is true. It would be very easy to do so, you know. All one would have to do would be to find out if she is alone in Hollywood. Then I would know that this child that is in my house is mine, for I know that Paula Perler would never give her child to any one but me as long as she could possibly provide for it.

Condone a Situation

I am glad you think that it is right for me not to tell Leslie. Honestly, Syd, I am not keeping this from her for my own sake, but for hers. I do not want to make her unhappy.
