My Most Interesting Case

The Times has asked Indianapolis lawyers to tell about the most unusual affairs they have been involved in. Here is No. 2:

By HENRY N. SPAAN

Forty years ago, more or less, Billy Lamb, another lawyer, and I were conducting a long-winded trial in some old justice of peace court located over a saloon on the corner of Delaware and Washington Sts. The suit was over possession of a cow.

The constable, on our demand for a jury, had gone down to the saloon below and returned in a jiffy with six worthy jurors. That was the number on a j. p. jury in those days.

Billy began his closing argument. He ranted, roared, and spread it on thick. Petty soon we noticed that one of the jurors was weeping.

"Heavens, I'm lost, if Billy can make them cry," I thought.

Billy bent his sole attention to the juror, and hammered home his most telling arguments, causing the tears to fall faster.

In those days I prided myself quite a bit on my ability as a budding orator, but on this occasion merely started a closing argument as a matter of form, as I thought the case was lost.

Singling out Billy's juror, as I got warmed up, I drew dreadful pictures of how that cow's owner would feel if he lost the animal he had cherished from calf-hood. Pretty soon, the tears started again. Spectators gasped at my ability, while I am frank to say I was astonished quite a bit myself.

The jury retired. In a few moments three big policemen walked in and said, "We have come after John Jones, who just escaped from the insane asylum. He's on the jury. We found out. You can tell him because he cries easily."

Taylor is expected to arrive Tuesday. In the past week he has spent two days in Columbus in an attempt to definitely establish the financial relationship of the Ohio and Indiana concerns.

According to McBride the Dollings company of this State was entirely subservient to the Ohio concern.

PARTIES COMBINE TO FIGHT PHONE RATE INJUNCTION

State Lawyers to Lead With City Representatives Assisting.

Arrangements were made today for full cooperation with the State's legal department of all agencies fighting the Indiana Bell Telephone Company's suit for an injunction that will make permanent increased rates and tolls which go into temporary effect Sept. 1.

Edward M. White, assistant attorney general of the State conferred with the public service commission, Mayor John C. Quick of Muncie, Mayor Blanchard Horne, Anderson, Corporation counsel Taylor E. Groninger of Indianapolis, and legal representatives of the commission.

It was agreed that White will have charge of the case when it comes up in Federal Court, probably in October, and that representatives of the commission and the cities affected by the increase will cooperate in the argument. The fight was discussed generally. Details will be arranged later.

White said he probably would file a written appearance Tuesday, the return date set when the original suits were filed. There was some talk of questioning the court's jurisdiction, but the matter was dismissed.

Energies of the State first will be directed toward attacking the company's application for a temporary restraining order, which was granted by Judge Page at Chicago.

The 4 1/2 per cent contract fee charged of the Indiana Bell by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company is regarded by those fighting the increase as the most vulnerable point in the Bell arguments for higher rates. It is said that the increased rates, which go into effect Sept. 1, will put an increased annual revenue of $22,000 into the coffers of the A. T. & T., and which will be of "no earthly use to Indiana patrons of the Bell."

The contract fee is taken from the gross revenues of the Indiana Bell. Other points which are to be fought are the Bell's claims of depreciation and going values.

Rates charged by the Bell will be compared with rates charged by independent companies in other cities in the State.

Ku-Klux Offers $5,000 Reward for Slayer of Member— Fight Occurs During Initiation Ceremonies— Investigation Conducted

By United Press BULLETIN

ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 27.—Howard Evans and members of the Ku-Klux Klan who were involved in the Carnegie riot Saturday night are in a position of forfeiting American citizenship, declared Wm. J. Simmons, founder and emperor of the Klan, here today.

Evans, imperial wizard, "for the time being," of the Klan, "evidently invaded Pennsylvania bristling with guns and daggers and his very presence was an offense against peace and order and a challenge to peaceful and loving and law-abiding citizens to either intercept and expel him and his followers," Colonel Simmons said.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Aug. 27.—District Attorney Samuel H. Gardner moved today to prevent further disturbance such as the riot in Carnegie late Sunday which resulted in the shooting to death of Thomas R. Abbott of Atlasburg, Washington County, a klansman.

Gardner conferred with chiefs of the Klan here and officials of Carnegie in an effort to learn what caused the mob of citizens of Carnegie to attack the klansmen with clubs and revolvers.

Chief Burgess Conley declared the klansmen who were the latter insisted on holding a parade. Conley said no application for permission to conduct a parade had been made to him.

Scores of arrests were made but the majority were released after a small fine on a charge of carrying revolvers. One man, Patrick McDermott, an undertaker of Carnegie, who was seen by eye-witnesses holding a revolver at the time Abbott fell, police say, was held in jail.

Dr. W. H. Evans, imperial wizard of the Klan who attended the initiation of a class of candidates on the Forsythe farm preceding the rioting, announced a reward of $2,500 for arrest and conviction of Abbott's slayers. Sam D. Rich, king klegg of the Klan, announced a similar reward.

Parade Was Forbidden Twenty thousand klansmen had gathered at the Forsythe farm near Carnegie early Saturday evening for the initiation. A number of the klansmen came into the borough limits earlier in the evening and minor disturbances followed, but it was not until the chiefs of the klansmen decided to hold a parade against the order of the officials of the town that the riot started.

The mob of Carnegie citizens, brandishing clubs and firearms met the marching klansmen at the Glendale bridge and warned them not to cross into the town. The marchers proceeded with the parade.

An automobile leading the parade was wrecked as the Carnegie men lunged themselves on the hooded marchers and curses and threats of "lynch them" and "get ropes" filled the air. The battle lasted for an hour over an area covering four Carnegie city blocks until Pittsburgh police arrived with riot guns and clubs and restored order. Hundreds of Klan members were unmasked and their tattered robes littered the streets.

More than 300 pieces firearms, from cheap pistols to shotguns, were found in the streets when the mob was finally disbursed.

Pretty Puffers of 'Pills' Protest the Potent Pipe

"Bring on the cigarettes, Oswald, the women just can't go pipes."

This is speaking for our own fair city. In London, well-dressed women are wont to inhale joyously to inhale smoke through fancy curved and straight stemmed pipes. And the same is said to be true in New York. But it "just isn't done" in Indianapolis.

A survey of cigar stores shows that the women smokers cling to the occasional "drag" on the lowly cigarette.

Few pipes have been sold, in spite of the fact that several stores carry a large supply of dainty, lady-like "hods."

"They sure crave the fancy stuff—trick cigarette holders, etc.," said John Conley, clerk at Donahue's cigar store. "But I've sold only a couple of pipes."

"Never sold a pipe to a woman in my life," declared Al Catt, of the House of Crane cigar store. "But I have a lot of regular cigarette customers."

No remarkable increase in the number of female cigarette users is reported. So the good old jimmy pipe remains the companion of men only.
