Prowler Is Being Probed

A negro, giving his name as Abraham Graham, 18, is under arrest today on a charge of vagrancy pending investigation. Merchant Policemen O. M. Pollock, 2013 W. Michigan St., said he caught the man prowling at Tenth St. and King Ave., at midnight Tuesday. He told Captain Fletcher at police headquarters that he lived at 942 N. Milroy Ave., but this proved false when officers took him there, police said.

Room Gets "Cleaning"

Arthur McPherson, 1616 Olive St., called police to his home and showed the officers where his room was forced open and a suit of clothes and two shirts valued at $73 and $70 in money taken. He mentioned a suspect.

Skin trouble costs many a man his job

No matter how efficient a man may be, if he has an ugly skin-eruption, there are positions in which he cannot be tolerated. He may know that it is not in the least contagious, but other people are afraid and avoid him, and he must make way for a man with a clear, healthy skin. Why run this risk, when

Danger of Over-Dressing Movies Is Discussed

Movie directors and producers are now directing their attention to the modern tendency of "over-dressing" movie scenes.

There seems to be a dangerous practice of directors to "over do" certain scenes in movies which do not require much treatment.

Realism is essential on the silver screen and a palace interior for the home of a merchant of a small town is not realism or good judgment.

Dramatic realism was well sustained in the recent movie version of "Bauu." The story demanded palaces as well as Russian squires and this was supplied in the right amount.

In some of De Mille's movies we expect and even demand over-dressing of scenes because the story demands it.

Relative to the danger of "over-dressing" movie scenes, I have received an interesting communication from Maurice Tourneur of Hollywood.

"There is a tendency on the part of some film producers to over-dress scenes and situations that begin to threaten the realism of the motion picture," says Tourneur, director of "Jealous Fools," for First National.

Judging from some pictures we have seen in late, all American families live in homes with the impressive proportions of the Grand Central Station in New York. The living room of the typical American home, as frequently pictured, discloses a frozen candelabra scattered about with vases filling up the chairs in the room.

"I recently viewed a picturization of a popular play. On the stage for many years the play told of the life and loves of a music hall singer, a drab young person who makes a living in the most drab surroundings. She plays in a tiny place frequented by the common people, by soldiers, sailors and laborers.

"The story is of tremendous dramatic interest, rendered the more vivid by the contrast of its colorful theme with the pale and wan surroundings. The play was made into a picture. The singer successful, wealthy. Her wardrobe filled with the costliest finery. Servants surrounded her. The tiny music hall with its plain deal tables was transformed into a magnificent theater, seating thousands.

"This tendency of elaboration and

'over-dressing,' if allowed to become general, will prove detrimental to the effectiveness of the cinema. With the idea of making 'big' productions, producers frequently enlarge the physical size, not seeming to realize that this merely strikes at the drama, weakens the realism and kills the very strength of the original plot in its contrast. Big scenes and elaborately costly settings will never in themselves make big productions."—(By W. D. H.)
