GROCCERS PROTEST RESTRICTIONS ON MEDICINAL SALES

Association Refuses to Attend Meeting With Board on Drug Question.

If drug stores are to be permitted to sell luncheon and electrical supplies, and sporting goods, and hardware, and groceries, and jewelry and stationery, why should groceries not be allowed to sell Epsom salts, and aspirin tablets, and cough syrup, and camphor and cathartic pills?

This question was asked in a statement today by Fred R. Pitcher, secretary of the Indiana Wholesale Grocers' Association.

The State board of pharmacy is objecting to the sale of these things by groceries, especially to the sale of aspirin. It has asked the grocers' association to submit, at a meeting of the board at Bedford Nov. 6, a list of medicinal articles the grocers believe they should be permitted to sell.

Pitcher said the grocers would refuse to go to a meeting in Bedford.

"Now the grocer carries just a few drug items, such as Epsom salts, aspirin tablets, cough syrup, camphor, cathartic pills, etc., all of which are sold in the manufacturers' original package," Pitcher said. "On each package is marked plainly how the medicine should be taken; not only that, but these medicines are well-known, advertised and popular with the public."

"The consumer knows before he makes the purchase just what he wants the item for and how to use it—just as a man who smokes knows what to do with a cigar."

"Why does the grocer carry these few drugs? Just this: In many farming communities and cross-roads towns there is no drug store, and if the grocer did not carry these items it would be necessary for people living in these communities to drive or walk five or six miles for relief such as family remedies would afford."

During the long search the oldest daughter, now 21, has aided her mother. On a recent vacation at New York she saw the picture of Samuel Lubinsky at a social agency, listed as a deserter. Believing it to be her father she informed her mother, who went to New York a few days ago to make sure the identification.

But Lubinsky untangled himself. His wife and son were in court. And Mrs. Lubinsky decided he was not her husband. Once again, she declared, not discouraged, she will continue the search.

But Lubinsky untangled himself. His wife and son were in court. And Mrs. Lubinsky decided he was not her husband. Once again, she declared, not discouraged, she will continue the search.
