

APPEAL TO MAKE ZONE RESIDENTIAL WON BY CITIZENS

Move to Compromise by Declaring a 'Business' Section Fails.

The long fight of residents living in territory bounded by Forty-Second St., Arsenal Ave., Fifty-Second St., and the Monon Railroad for classification as residential territory was won today. An ordinance designating that part of the city as residential was passed by city council Monday night.

A public hearing at the last meeting had revealed organized opposition from the Polar Ice and Fuel Company which is attempting to erect an ice plant in that district, and a court suit is regarded possible to decide the issue.

With a deadlock looming, Councilman Buchanan Monday night offered a compromise amendment which classified the territory as business instead of residential or industrial, but the move failed.

A motion that the measure be passed without the compromise was carried unanimously.

Tip to Officers Ends in Auto Pursuit Here and Arrest.

Mamie Isley, 42, is back behind the bars of the Indiana Woman's Prison today after two and one-half days liberty as a result of breaking jail Saturday.

The leader of the youthful bandit gang, which robbed the Alert (Ind.) State Bank of $45,000 in Liberty bonds, May 10, 1922, was captured by Claude M. Worley, county crime investigator and Sheriff George Snider at White River Blvd., and New York St. Monday night.

The officers received a tip Mrs. Isley intended meeting Harold Guesse, a friend, at the Indianapolis Abattoir plant, W. Morris St.

Muffled in a large cloak, with hat pulled down, the woman entered an automobile with Guesse. The officers overtook the pair and Guesse was arrested charged with vagrancy.

"Only Wanted to See Opal"

Mrs. Isley had discarded her prison garb. She said when she left the prison last Saturday she walked down Massachusetts Ave. in her uniform, but was not recognized.

She went to a friend's house, where she remained.

"I was coming in tonight, anyway," she said with a laugh when arrested. "I only wanted to see Opal first."

Opal is her daughter, 17, who is in the Long Hospital with a leg broken July 20 when she attempted to escape from the Indiana Girls' School by leaping from a third story window.

Hidden Bonds Are Blamed

Mrs. Isley was described by Deputy Prosecutor Remy in her trial last spring as "the woman who held revolver practice at sunset on her little farm at Julietta for a gang of youthful bandits."

Two of the youths are in the State reformatory and her husband, Alfred, is in the State prison. Part of the bonds were never recovered. Court officials believe that this fact is responsible for the two attempts to escape.

Mrs. Isley was sentenced to two to fourteen years after a seven-day trial. She appealed the appeal pending in the Supreme Court.

BROWN IS SILENT ON THOSE BOOKS

Where, Oh! Where Are Agriculture Board Records on the McCray Transaction?

Records of the State board of agriculture will be closed to public inspection until they have been examined by the State board of accounts or have been employed by the Marion County grand jury in investigating Governor McCray's financial affairs.

The board's records were closed a week ago by the "executive committee" after a one-day meeting of the board last Monday, when it was announced the books would be "open to public inspection."

They were left open one day, but were closed the day following.

A reporter who asked to see the books was told by I. Newt Brown, secretary-treasurer, they were not available.

"On whose authority were the books closed," Brown was asked.

He shook his head.

"When do you think they will be open again?" he was asked.

"I'm not talking about this," he replied.

"Have you taken the records from the office for safekeeping, Mr. Brown?"

"I can't talk to you now," he said.

The records, when opened, may show whether:

Governor McCray borrowed $155,000 from the board or whether the board gave McCray the money for deposit in the Discount and Deposit State Bank of Kentland, of which McCray formerly was president.
