

Y. W. C. A. SCHOOLS TO OPEN WINTER TERM IN JANUARY

Same Courses Will Be Continued From Past Twelve Weeks.

The general education department of the Young Women's Christian Association will open a winter term of twelve weeks the week of Jan. 7. The same schedule of classes which has been offered during the past term will be continued. These courses include household arts, business courses, languages, fine arts, special courses, and private tutoring. Under household arts there will be both day and night classes in millinery, and sewing and a morning class in pattern drafting. The millinery course will run for eight weeks with Mrs. Wilson B. Parker as instructor. The courses in sewing will be for twelve weeks. The business courses which will be offered are show card lettering with W. L. Winning as instructor, and business English with Miss Augusta Mering. The winter term in show card lettering will include ten lessons. The languages will include French under Miss Marie Cousin, Spanish under the Rev. A. R. Miles, and Italian under Signora Clorinda Conte. Reed basketry will be taught by Mrs. E. L. Hicks and China painting by Mrs. E. W. Stoddard. Four special courses are modern drama under Miss Augusta Mering, dramatic art under Miss Helen Sartor, self expression under Mrs. Leo K. Fessler, manicuring, facial massage, and care of the hair, under Mrs. Ethel I. Stewart.

The educational department will arrange through its director for private tutoring in any grade or high school subjects. During the past term these tutoring classes in high school subjects have been meeting. Twelve girls and women have been enrolled and will take the State high school examination for credit the last Saturday in January. These classes which include first year Algebra, first year Latin, and first year English, will open their second semester's work during the week of Jan. 28. A schedule of all the courses will be sent to any one desiring it.

Y. M. C. A. Notes
An informal open house program will be held Sunday in the lounge from 4 to 6 p. m. There will be stories and singing. Tea will be served.

The regular supper meeting and program of the Federation of Industrial Clubs will be held Wednesday. The general program at 7 p. m. will consist of stunts by the different clubs.

The business women's Bible class, which meets Tuesdays in the lounge at 8 p. m., will begin its second short course Jan. 15. The title of the course will be "How to Know the Bible," with Miss Alice E. Newman, educational director, as the leader. Particular emphasis will be placed upon the Old Testament with a discussion of the various types of literature and the historical background of each.

In order to accommodate the delegates to the student volunteer convention the cafeteria department of the Y. W. C. A. has arranged a special dining room for students in social hall.

Two Concerts

The first concert of the new year presented under the direction of the Ona B. Talbot Fine Arts Enterprises will be the "Jenny Lind Concert" by Frieda Hempel, soprano, on Sunday afternoon, Jan. 20, at the Murat.

The program she will present in the Murat Theater will be entirely different from that of her former visit. She will surround herself with the atmosphere of old-time customs and will wear the replica of the gown worn by Jenny Lind when she toured America in 1850.

Chosen from the world's living singers to impersonate Jenny Lind in the Historical Centennial Concert, Oct. 6, 1920—the one hundredth anniversary of her birth, one authority on music voiced the feeling of all when he wrote: "This great honor has come to Frieda Hempel because, according to history and tradition, her voice, her art and her tradition most strikingly resemble those rare endowments of the earlier queen of song."

The other Sunday afternoon concert under the Ona B. Talbot concert direction are Mischa Elman, violinist, Feb. 3; Feodor Chaliapin, famous Russian singer, Feb. 17; Josef and Marie Loevina, in a two-plate recital on March 3. The second of the series of orchestra concerts will be on Monday evening, Jan. 28, when the Cincinnati Orchestra will again be heard, with Rudolph Ganz, pianist, playing the Tchaikovsky B flat minor concerto with the orchestra.

Orloff Trio in Another Free Concert
On Sunday afternoon, Jan. 6, the second of the series of recitals given by the Orloff Trio at the John Heron Art Institute, will present a program of French compositions in connection with the exhibit of French paintings. The first of these musicals was received with much pleasure, and the members of the Art Association are desirous that the public should know that these concerts are open to the public without fee.

The following is the complete program:
(a) Gavotte in D.....Rameau
(b) Chanson Louis XIII.....Pavane
(c) Meditation.....Bach-Gounod
(d) Quatuor à Chant.....Gounod

High Principles Serve as Guard in Temptation

No matter how carefully and tenderly a child is guarded during his early years, a time comes when he must battle life for himself, when he is "thrown upon his own." It may be away at school, or in the business world.

What he makes of himself depends on his "background." That is something wealth alone can not give him. A boy from the poorest home can work his way up to the top—if he is given the right sort of inspiration at home before he starts to climb the ladder of success.

A girl to whom a new dress is a luxury can face temptation without fear, if she is inspired with the principles of true worth.

It is such equipment that is needed most in the journey of life.

Choice of Two Roads

Dear Martha Lee: I am a girl 19 years old and I work in an office with girls and men. One of the men always tries to make dates with me and wants to bring me presents. I never have let him, because he is married.

I am afraid to tell mother about this, although I tell her almost everything, because she has always taught me not to do things like this. I would think of going with him, but he says he is a man of good character and I cannot get along with another man.

Be thankful for your mother. The other girl does not have a mother like yours, does she? I am sure she could not.

Ignore this man, Annabelle; he's dangerous. Even though his wife were untrue, that would be no excuse for his actions, and you surely would not take his word for it, anyway.

"Pretty things" can not bring happiness, my dear. His wife probably has those, and it is easy to see she is not happy.

Dangerous Husband

To Martha Lee: I have a sister who is married. She is 23. Her husband is 41. He is awfully jealous and he has nagged her until she does not love him any more. Last night he accused her of being with another man. This man is a friend of both him and her.

They have a baby girl 3 years old, whom they both love dearly. But they are not happy. Do you think she should stay with her husband, for the child's sake, or go before it is too late. Last night he even drew a gun on her.

Your sister surely had better get out before it is "too late."

After-Church Walks

Dear Martha Lee: We are girls 14 and 15 years old and have two boy friends who are very jealous. Please advise us.

Jealous? How ridiculous, isn't it? Pay no attention to their jealousy, and not much to the boys.

LETTER FROM SYDNEY CARTON TO JOHN ALDEN PRESCOTT

I haven't written you, Jack, because I have been too damn mad. I was afraid to entrust what I would write to the mail bag for fear it would burn up the other letters.

Of all selfish, unappreciative, egotistical, silly asses that I have ever met you take the cake. Do you think I am a man of straw to be thrown around as a buffet for your despicable carcass?

It is all very well for you to write me that self-preservation is the first law of nature, but what about me? Do you think it was a decent kind of thing to do to let Leslie imagine I was the father of your own baby? For he is your baby. I've got the whole thing from Paula.

Right here let me say that Paula Perlier is much too good for you and she only put that baby on your doorstep because she had an idea Leslie was the true sweet woman she is and would take care of her child when it was impossible for her to care for it.

You really didn't enter into her calculations in the least. She only saw that Leslie was ill and a baby was necessary to save her life.

Think of it! If it is possible that thoughts can be born in that deep vacuum encircled by your skull. The woman whom you wronged was ready to give to the woman you married her own child. Partly of course because she knew it would be well taken care of, but she knew all else because she knew the gift would probably save Leslie's life.

And you needn't tell me, Jack, that you haven't helped that damnable lie of my fatherhood. Why, I'll never dare show my face to Leslie again. I wish I had told her all about you before we were married.

I suppose you thought it was a brilliant idea, but I'd like to smash that mass of emasculated molecules which you probably call your brain, in which the idea found lodgment.

You've stretched our friendship too far, Jack. All my life I have been sure of you when you have come with your troubles brought on by your own asinine acts.

Now I am all through. I may as well tell you that Paula is wild to have her baby back. She seems to think she has done her duty by lending it to Leslie long enough to save your wife's life and now the boy should be returned to her.

Of course I told her that, as you had legally adopted it, she could do nothing. But you know Paula—although she has almost lost her accent and become a woman of the world, yet she has it in her to kick up more trouble than any woman I have ever known. If she thinks it is necessary to gain her ends.

In the meantime you might well know that I shall not lift a finger to help you out of this despicable scrape you have gotten me mixed up in, as well as yourself.

The only thing that worries me in the least is that these two girls love me. I call them girls for they are both on the threshold of life—will have to suffer long, long years on account of the shameful and utterly contemptible business of man's desire.

I'd like to write more to you but I can't find words to express the fury with which your letter stirred me. I'll never forgive you for this. (Copyright, 1923, NEA Service, Inc.)
