Little Old White-Haired Woman Refugee Stirs International Circles.

By A. H. FREDERICK
NEA Service Staff Writer

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 15.—Nicholas, czar of all the Russians, is alive—a prisoner in Japan of his own desire.

Intrenched behind garden walls and thick-foliaged trees—using as protective camouflage the modesty of the house he has selected—the former ruler has found refuge in the Orient.

From Madame Eugenia Gaevsky, little old white-haired lady, who makes her living here teaching languages and acting interpreter to her fellow Russians, comes this report.

Story Rouses Interest
Her affirmative story has caused a ripple in international circles, and temporarily set aside sinister tales of butchery of the Romanov royal family in the prison castle of Ekaterinburg, July 17, 1918.

Like a counter narrative, supposedly issued by the Bolshevik government, to the effect that Nicholas is not only dead but his severed head is now a curiosity, preserved in alcohol, in a Russian museum.

But such accounts have not shaken Madame Gaevsky's faith.

Once an intimate of those moving in the inner circles of Russian society, and knowing well the nobility whose names were synonymous with the power of the old regime, she persists in belief of her story.

"It is indeed true," she stoutly maintains. "The little father is alive."

"Those of unquestionable veracity have told me they have seen him."

"His life? Of that they cannot tell. None but his closest intimates know him only as a man who shrouds himself in inconspicuousness, who shrinks from contact with the street, who is, perhaps, a little queer, a bit feeble minded."

"But long before these people told me they had seen the czar, I knew that he had made his escape to Japan."

"In 1918, I first heard it, direct from those who heard it from the dowager empress herself."

Whether a myth fathered by wish, or a true high light in historical romance, belief in the escape of the czar is held by many of the Russian refugees here, says Madame Gaevsky.

"Imperialists were busy during the days when the 'little father' and his family were prisoners of the soviet. Royalist spies penetrated into the red councils and carried back reports to their superiors, the chiefs of the plotters," she relates.

"Escaped by Ruse"
"One night as the imperial family sat with their meditations on what the future might hold, the door opened, and a small group of peasants entered. Peasants in dress, but not deportment. With all the grace of the court, they saluted the czar."

"They told him of the plot. He was to escape in the dress of a peasant, while one of their number, very similar in face and figure and carriage to the czar, was to stay behind in his place, to avoid pursuit."

"The czar demurred. He would not allow the sacrifice, nor would he desert his family."

"The conspirators apparently were prepared for this, for and without unnecessary disturbance they forcibly garbed him in peasant attire and spirited him away."

"Only a few days later until the pseudo czar and the four members of the royal family were led to their death in the cellar of the fortress."

"How it was managed, I have never heard," says Madame Gaevsky. Perhaps the guard that night was loyal to the imperial house, maybe he was bribed, maybe vodka.

"But I do know he is alive. Only he and the Grand Duchess Tatiana escaped. The grand duchess died with her soldier husband earlier in the revolution."

"When I am brought face to face with a radical modernist I find something in his soul which I can't find in mine.
