EVERYTHING SET FOR OPENING OF ANNUAL CAR SHOW

Elaborate Program Arranged for Visitors at State Fairground.

With every exhibit, from the most minute accessory to the biggest truck in place, the thirteenth annual automobile show of the Indianapolis Auto Trade Association at the Auto Show Bldg., at the fairground, will throw its doors open to the public at 7 p. m. today.

The show will be the most complete of the exhibitions in the history of the organization. The great building with its 60,000 square feet of floor space will be utilized to the last inch by more than 100 exhibitors of pleasure cars, trucks, accessories and various kinds of automotive equipment. So great is the demand for space that John B. Orman, show manager, found it necessary to reduce the space allotments of many exhibitors in order to accommodate all displays.

Decorations Elaborate When the doors are opened the public will find the building transformed into a hall of beauty. Never has as much time, attention and expense put into the decorations as this year. For weeks a large corps of scenic artists and decorators from the studio of Charles Read has been at work designing, building and putting the decorations in place. The result has been a garden effect, which makes the spectators forget March winds and think of spring and early summer. The musical program will be the most varied and complete ever given at an Indianapolis auto show. In addition a variety of novel entertainment features will be provided.

Public Is Interested Due to radical changes and advances in automotive development during the past year the public has taken an unusual degree of interest in the movement of new models. This is expected to result in record breaking attendance at the show.

Four-wheel brakes and balloon tires are the two most discussed features of the 1924 season, from a mechanical standpoint. Estimates, more than 60,000 cars equipped with four-wheel brakes now are in service in the United States. Every possible variety of four-wheel brake will be found at the show. Manufacturers who have not adopted the feature have in many instances greatly improved accepted brake designs by improvements and refinements.

The balloon tire also will come in for its share of attention. Although not as widely adopted as standard equipment as the four-wheel brake, it has been listed as optional equipment on a great number of cars.

The growing popularity of the closed car is attested by the large percentage of sedans, coupes and coaches on exhibit. Manufacturers agree that the demand for motor cars of this type will be greater this year than ever before.

HAREM STARTLED AT ORDER TO MOVE

Angora Assembly Will Vote to Suppress Caliph—Guards Surround Palace at Constantinople.

By United Press. CONSTANTINOPLE, March 3.—Guards surrounded the palace of Caliph Abdul Medjid Effendi and supervised the household and the imperial residence today, under orders from the Angora government. The purpose was to prevent the Caliph from carrying out his reported intention of fleeing into Egypt.

The activities, which caused consternation among the odalisks, commonly caused wives, of the Caliph, and to have started the chief eunuchs of the harem, followed word from Angora that the national assembly soon will vote to suppress the Caliphate and expel the Caliph and his considerable family. Mustafa Kemal, president of Turkey, has determined religion must be entirely separated from the state.

The Sultan of Turkey united the temporal and spiritual headship in himself in the sixteenth century. The title of Caliph indicates a successor of Mohammed.

Harems Lose Importance Abdul Hamid was the last sultan to enjoy full automatic powers. Since his time the imperial harems, about which the western world has wondered for centuries, have lost much of their importance.

The present Caliph has been in power only since November, 1922, when his deposed uncle, Mohammed VI, was driven into exile. Sultan Abdul Medjid Effendi, whom it is now proposed to depose and expel, virtually is a student of the modern world. But he is a prisoner in the palace, shut in since boyhood in view of his probable succession to the Caliphate. He receives visitors in audience, paints, and studies music. And the mystery of the sultan's harems remains.

Provides for Exile The bill before the national assembly at Angora provides for exiling and depriving of Turkish citizenship all members of the Caliph's family. Just how many wives Abdul Medjid had is not known. The ex-Sultan, Mehmed IV, who died towards the end of the World War, had 300.

Mehmed's harem was divided into odalisks (young women) and odalsks (concubines).

Novices or virgins were known as odalsks. These were gathered from afar by many of the more aged women of the harem, whose particular function it was to select beautiful wives for the sultan.

Favorite for a While When one of the odalsks attracts the sultan she becomes a guesdab (near to the eyes is the closest English translation) and is favored for a while. If the sultan's love dies she is relegated to the position of ikbal.

The same principles and methods apply to the households of the sultan's sons, although the latter have less women at their disposal.

Women of the harem who bear the sultan children are known as cadines or legitimate wives, being married to the master by the "nikah," or Moslem marriage ceremony. Politics.

DANIELS DECLARES FOR NEW DEAL IN U. S. GOVERNMENT

Principles of Honesty Are Stressed by Former Secretary of Navy.

(Copyright, 1924, by United Press) WASHINGTON, March 3.—The oil scandal has made it necessary that the United States have a new Government based on the principles of common honesty," Josephus Daniels, former Secretary of the Navy said today.

Daniels, mentioned as a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, is writing a book on his former chief, Woodrow Wilson.

The former Navy secretary declined to discuss the possibility of his being a candidate for the Presidency.

"The present is no time for candidates," Daniels said. "The people have lost confidence in their government, that is the pitiable and deplorable truth."

Must Right Wrong

"The conscientious Republicans and honest Democrats must right this wrong. And the Government will not be changed from the inside; it must be changed from the outside. There are many honest men in government, of course, but corruption has poisoned the whole system."

"There has been no voluntary active step by the present Administration to right the wrong of the oil leases. What has been done by the Administration has been forced by the minority, by Senator Walsh in opposition to his colleagues, who sought to whitewash the whole business."

Is Shamefully Involved

"The Government itself has been shamefully involved through the use of confidential Government codes, the secret service, the very men that should be used to run down crooks. Why, the secret service should have been scrapped before having become involved in this scandal."

"I predict there will be a new spirit guiding the making of the platform at the Democratic convention. There will be no place for the old-time worn planks of 'we favor this and that' concerning harmless subjects that heretofore have been made paramount."
