BUFFALO, N. Y., March 18.—A Nation-wide campaign to "get out the vote" for the 1924 election will be launched at the fifth annual convention of the National League of Women Voters here April 24-29.

The test of the league's four years of work is the 1924 election, according to the president, Mrs. Maud Wood Park.

According to figures, fewer than half the eligible voters—only 49 per cent—voted in the presidential election in 1920.

Ballot Negligence

In 1922, thirty-three States elected Governors and only a little more than one-third of the possible voters cast their ballots, and in primary and local elections the percentage is much lower.

"Every woman in the league is called upon to remedy this condition," Mrs. Park states. "If we are to be a democracy it is time we were about it! Let us fix our 1924 goal 75 per cent of the vote that could have been cast in 1920, and enlist the help of the public-spirited men and women from one end of the country to the other in carrying out the plan."

The Governors of five eastern States, New York, Maryland, Delaware, Pennsylvania and New Jersey, have been invited to attend the Governors' mass meeting April 25.

VERTIGO

Many persons are subject to attacks of vertigo, which may be called plain dizziness. Looking at objects high in the air, or remaining in one position with the vision fixed downward, often causes this condition. Some people who ride backward in a train or automobile are also subject to this vertigo or dizziness which, if continued for any appreciable length of time, frequently results in rather severe nausea and a nervous, weak inactivity of the body. These conditions which have been mentioned are merely physiologic and are not the result of any disease conditions, but may be traced to lack of training in certain uses of the bodily powers in different situations and positions or for other reasons hard to explain.

Pathologic vertigo is another kind of dizziness which may appear at times in a rather moderate way as the result of some organic brain disease or disturbance. It may result from some ear defect (aural vertigo), or from certain kinds of neurotic vertigo, those suffering from neurasthenia, psychoneurosis or from congenital nervousness suffer vertigo and another cause may be from cerebral anemia or transitory cerebral intoxication.

In younger persons, the ordinary attacks of vertigo may be guarded against to a certain extent. Habits of eating at regular hours aid in a marked degree in reducing dizziness, either on arising in the morning or under conditions which strain the eyes or muscles to a far greater extent than usual. Careful attention to the blood condition, circulation and blood pressure will aid in avoiding vertigo.

Advanced cases in older persons or in neurotic types must be treated in a most careful way by a physician. The symptoms in such cases are often indicated by fear of this secret drain on the system and also by what is termed autogestation.

Help Nature Fight Acidosis

Milk of Magnesia now combined with Mineral Oil to conquer indigestion and constipation

Most of us eat too much and exercise too little. The result is constipation and acidosis (sour stomach), twin foes of health, the cause of 75% of all sickness.

If you wake up in the morning with a dark brown taste in your mouth, if your stomach is easily upset, if you are troubled with gas, have bad breath, don't let things go. You have acidosis which unless checked, may develop into serious sickness.

Do two things if you would be free from acidosis: 1—Neutralize excess acids in the stomach; 2—Rid the body regularly of digestive waste.

The finest anti-acid known to science is milk of magnesia and the best known agent for conquering constipation is pure mineral oil. Now science combines these two great aids to health in one effective emulsion, Haley's Magnesia-Oil.

Stop at your druggist today and get a bottle of this wonderful new agent for correcting acidosis and constipation. Wonderfully pleasant to take; no bad after effects. And Haley's does not form a habit. It can be given without hesitation to young or old. Trial size bottle 35c; economical family size $1.00. The Haley-M-O Company, Indianapolis, Ind.

Dishonor in Love Leads to Doubt in Business

Can a man be dishonest and dishonorable in love, and still be honest and honorable in business?

Possibly he can, but I, for one, would not want to trust him with any of my affairs, those of the heart or of the pocket-book.

If a man is morally corrupt, he may have some redeeming qualities, but they cannot offset the depravity. If a man will cheat at cards, he probably will cheat at tennis. If he will deceive the woman he pretends to love, he probably will not hesitate to deceive the man with whom he makes a business deal.

It was not written that a man could keep one black spot on his character from spreading until it blackens his whole soul.

Quite Shameless

Dear Martha Lee: Some time ago I met a very likeable young man, through my father, a prominent Philadelphia business man, who was interested in this man in a business way.

This man, L. W., soon became well known in Philadelphia social circles. Every one accepted and approved of him, including my father.

When he told me he loved me and asked me to become his wife, I consented. My father was quite pleased.

Recently L. W. confessed to me that he had a wife and small son in St. Louis. He said that, although it would be impossible for us to marry just now, he wished to give up everything and go away—abroad, or somewhere, with me. The stunk!

It is easier to live than to quit loving. Here's my question:

If L. W. was about to pull off a big business deal with my father—mainly because Dad thinks of him as a future son-in-law and trusts him—I am now visiting an aunt here in Indiana. I receive letters from L. W. almost daily, urging me to reconsider and to keep quiet about our broken engagement until his business deal is closed. Should I? I am rather afraid that if L. W. was not square with me in our love affair, he will not be square with Dad in his business relations.

On the other hand, I do not want to ruin my chances by influencing Dad. Do you think I would be justified in writing my father and telling him everything? Or would that look merely catty and petty?

A KEYSTONE GIRL.

Possibly it has not occurred to you that the business deal may have had something to do with the man's declaration of love for you. A man like that would not be beyond such an act.

My advice is to tell your father the whole story as soon as possible, and then let him take whatever steps he thinks best. Don't spare this man. Safeguard others whom he might try to victimize at least.

Then forget him.

Sacrifice Unappreciated

Dear Miss Lee: I have given up everything on earth that a woman holds dear—my brothers and my home in St. Louis. I love you. I have gone to his home to help him care for his aged parents. Every six or eight weeks he will have an excuse to go out of town, but he always takes another woman with him. Still, he claims to love only me.

At present, conditions are such we cannot marry. But, don't you think he ought to be true to me for what I have done and am doing for him? I am as true to him as a woman can be, and love him better than I love life itself. I am not a young girl, but a middle-aged woman. Now, ought I stay and help with his parents, or let him try it by himself? M. F. O.

Your story is old, old, and yet, every woman who does as you have done has to learn for herself that a man such as the one for whom you have sacrificed your honor will take all a woman has to give, and then ask for more.

You can not regain the years you have lost. But it is not too late to break off the relationship, and travel the rest of the way of life on the straight road.
