OILAR IS NAME ASSOCIATED WITH GOOD FURNITURE

Established Business in Indianapolis in 1906—Stock
Made in Own Shops.

Since the year 1906 the name of Oilar has been closely associated with the furniture business of Indianapolis. A reputation for handling good furniture was established by this firm, and the reputation has been retained through all these years by George H. Oilar, who has continued his connection with retail furniture dealing in the city ever since.

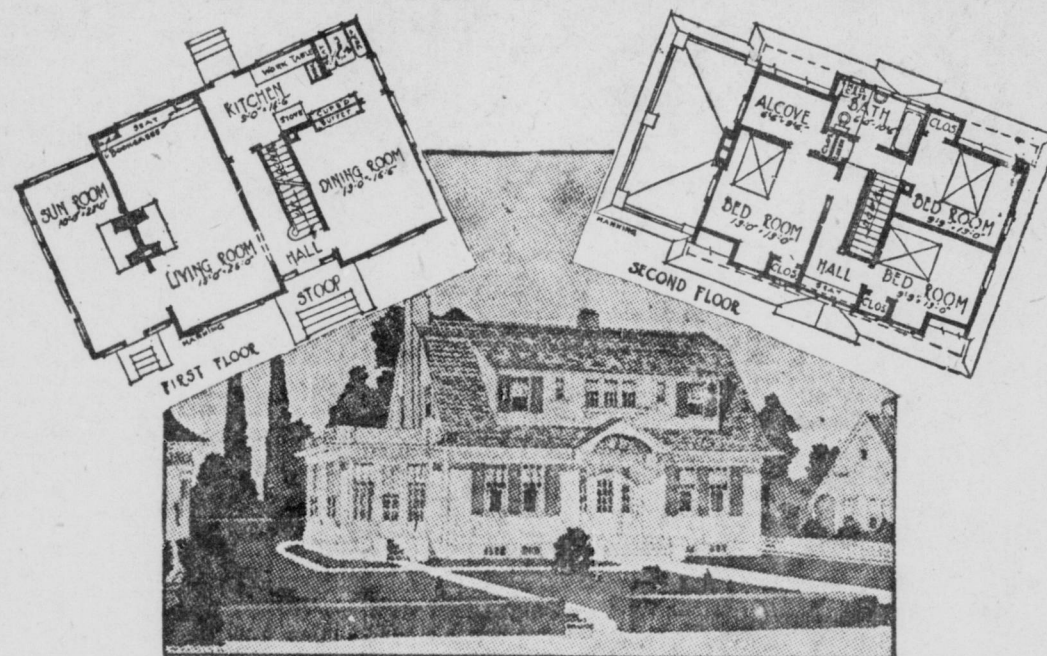

George H. Oilar remained in the business when Oilar Brothers' store was sold to the Foster Furniture Company of Ft. Wayne, which also had branches in Lafayette and Ft. Wayne. He was vice president and general manager of the Foster company until 1918, when he took over the management of the Foster store in the Winslow Bldg., on W. Market St.

When this store was sold George H. Oilar and his son, Millard Y. Oilar, formed an incorporation known as the Oilar Furniture Shops, established a retail store at 231 Massachusetts Ave. Mr. Oilar and his son also purchased the Foster Upholstering Shops, and installed them in a part of the building their store now occupies with William H. Spearing as foreman.

In the Oilar Furniture Shops are found furniture of up-to-date design, a varied line of floor coverings, and a selection of upholstered suites, all made by expert workmen in the Oilar Upholstering Shops. The Oilar company has been successful in the store that was opened Jan. 1, 1923, and Mr. Oilar and his son feel justified in anticipating an ever greater success.

Another son of Mr. Oilar, Rozier D. Oilar, Jr., has made a considerable success in the furniture business. Although only 26 years of age, Rozier Oilar is buyer of furniture for the Fair Store in Chicago, carrying responsibilities that formerly entrusted only to older men of long experience in the business.

DRAPERY PROBLEMS SOLVED BY PETTIS

Interior Decorations Styles
Change Like Fashions.

"Let Pettis solve your window shade and drapery problems."

This is the slogan of the drapery department of the Pettis Dry Goods Company as the spring season is ushered in with its attendant cleaning and replacement of the interior home decorations that have served out their attractiveness. According to Mangus Manson, manager of this department in the Pettis store, styles in draperies change as do styles in personal attire and adornment.

"The home owner," says Mr. Manson, "who would keep abreast of the times, knows that money is best expended for interior decoration after consulting decorators who are able to submit plans and sketches and to suggest the best styles."

The Pettis company carries the largest and most varied stock of draperies in Indiana. It includes creases, imported velours, damasks, tapestries, Belgian slip-over linens, Swiss curtains of the finest laces, silk fabrics, among which are to be found the new "sunshine gauze," a silk that is guaranteed to be "sun-fast," which is to say that its colors are unaffected by exposure to sunlight; other lightweight silks that are used for overdrapes in living rooms or dining rooms, flit and Quaker-craft nets.

room furniture and upholstered living room furniture.

The Smuck Company's store is located at 109 S. Meridian St. Here the company had built up a large patronage in its rug, carpet and linoleum departments. The management of the store found that dining room and living room furniture could be supplied its customers, and so gave over a large part of the first floor to these new lines.

In carrying an unusually complete line of rugs, carpets and linoleums of all kinds, the Smuck Company offers a wide variety of materials from which floor coverings for the home can be selected. The Smuck store has become known over all Indianapolis because of the fact that in its stock are carried all odd-sized rugs not practical for general house furnishing stores to carry.

FURNITURE ADDED TO SMUCK STOCK

Further evidence that S. Meridian St. is becoming a retail thoroughfare has been evidenced lately by the fact that the Smuck Rug and Carpet Company has added to its former lines home furnishings that include dining
