Punishment of Governor Warren T. McCray rests with Judge Albert B. Anderson of Federal Court. The judge will sentence the Governor at 10 a. m. Wednesday.

less of his broad acres and extensive property, that he has no more right than any one else to violate the law. "There never was an instance yet where a verdict was returned under such circumstances that I have not put the defendant in jail."

"Mr. Marshall, take charge of this man, put him in the county jail and keep him there until day after tomorrow. Then produce him in court at 10 o'clock in the morning."

"Gentlemen of the jury, you are discharged."

Brief Respite Given

The Governor was taken to the marshal's office, accompanied by his attorneys. The party remained there until about 7 p. m. when the party went to supper. Meantime, permission had been obtained from Judge Anderson for the Governor to remain out of jail for a few hours to attend to private and State business.

The Governor, dejection written on his countenance, was accompanied by his attorneys, James W. Noel and Michael A. Ryan, and Deputy United States Marshal Harry Wertz, to a cafeteria on Pennsylvania St., opposite the Federal Bldg.

McCray, leading the rest with a lightly laden tray, found a table in a corner of the restaurant, and was shortly joined by his attorneys, Wertz and another table.

"Throughout the meal the conversation was subdued, the Governor, his face haggard and wan, stared vaguely into space as he talked in short, broken sentences. Outside could be heard newshy boys crying their extra Noel got up from the table twice and brought glasses of milk. The Governor ate but little.

McCray Offers to Pay

When the meal was finished, Ryan arose. McCray offered to pay for the meal. Ryan indicated it had been paid for and purchased cigars.

Noel left the table for a moment to get another glass of milk. McCray was left entirely alone. The restaurant was nearly deserted. The Governor sat alone in his chair, staring before him with downcast eyes. His face showed lines of worry and weariness.

Noel returned and sat down. A few words passed between them. Ryan returned with a glass of milk. They returned overcoats as they approached. Their return was unnoticed by McCray and Noel.

After a moment's pause, Ryan asked in a loud voice: "Governor, are you ready?"

McCray and his attorney started at the request. They arose and Ryan asked the Governor into his overcoat. The two then preceded the marshal and Noel across the street to the Federal Building and into the marshal's office.

After supper the party returned to the marshal's office. One of the last acts of the Governor before starting to jail was the pardon of Fred Wilson, a "lifer" at the State prison, where he was sentenced for murder.

Wilson, when 17 years old, together with his father, was convicted of murder in southern Indiana. He was unable to read or write when he entered prison, but under teaching became one of the best clerks in the prison.

McCray has been greatly interested in his case. The pardon was made on recommendation of all prison officials.

Suffered From Strain

Although plainly suffering from the strain to which he had been subjected, McCray retained control of himself with an effort. That he was shaken was apparent to all, and at times tears stood in his eyes. But he never broke down.

At one time he sent for two newspaper men, whom he knew personally, and talked with them briefly. The conversations were entirely personal and he steadily refused to comment on possibilities of resignation from office or appeal from the verdict of the jury.

Among the Governor's friends who came to the marshal's office were John Moorman of Knox, his brother-in-law; Bernard Griffey, and his son-in-law, William P. Evans, former prosecutor of Marion County, and Harry Fenton.

At 9:27 the Governor, accompanied by Marshal Meredith, Fred T. Cretors, deputy marshal, his attorneys and friends left the marshal's office and walked down the east stairway to the Governor's car, which stood at the Pennsylvania St. entrance of the Federal Bldg.

As he left the building he turned to the newspaper men and with a wan smile he said in a low voice: "Good-night, boys."

INGROWN TOE NAIL

Turns Out Itself

A noted authority says that a few drops of "Outgro" upon the skin surrounding the ingrowing nail reduces inflammation and pain, and so softens the tender, sensitive skin underneath the toe nail, that it can penetrate the flesh, and the nail turns naturally outward almost overnight.

"Outgro" is a harmless antiseptic manufactured for chiropodists. However, anyone can buy from the drug store a tiny bottle containing directions.—Advertisement.

M'CRAV IS VISITED BY MANY FRIENDS

12:30 p. m. meals for a party of eight, the Governor, Meredith, Noel, Robinson, Moorman, Fogarty, Griffey and Miss Bush, were brought in from a hotel.

The Governor was taken from jail by Meredith at 9:30 a. m. He went immediately to the marshal's office where he remained in conference with his attorneys, Fogarty and Moorman, until the trip to the Statehouse was made.

He has not seen his wife or family since the jury returned a verdict of guilty Monday. Mrs. McCray, it is said, has gone into seclusion and has refused to receive callers.

Composure Regained

The Governor looked to be in splendid condition today. He had regained the wonderful composure which has characterized him throughout his difficulties, and which was momentarily shaken Monday night.

According to friends he has become reconciled to his fate and will accept it with good grace.

McCray breakfasted in the Marion County jail on the regular jail menu—rice, bread, coffee and molasses.

Along with all other prisoners, the Governor was awakened at 5 a. m. by deputy sheriffs. Each one made up his cot, and after breakfast, began the daily routine of sitting, walking around or sleeping. The room is about sixty-five feet long by forty feet wide, and the eighty odd prisoners are allowed to wander at will over it. It is equipped with bath rooms, while two prisoners run a barber shop at one end.

Heavy iron bars cross the windows. The place is light and comparatively cheerful, although filled with odor of disinfectant.

Straw Tick on Cot

Although prisoners may send out for food, Sheriff George Snider said, the Governor did not avail himself of the opportunity. A jail cot with a straw tick was his bed.

At 9:30 p. m. Monday the Governor appeared at the jail doors, in custody of Marshal Meredith. With him were his personal attorney, James W. Noel; his son-in-law, William P. Evans, former Marion County prosecutor, and State Purchasing Agent Fred Robinson. The two latter had been around the jail more than an hour for the Governor to appear.

Struggles for Self-Control

Just before the Governor appeared newspaper photographers were ordered from the jail yard by Sheriff George Snider, at request of Evans.

With tears in his eyes, the Governor bade an affectionate farewell to his party on the jail steps. He was agitated and nervous, but struggled for self-control as the heavy barred door banged behind him.

Meredith made out the necessary papers, while the Governor stood dejectedly watching him, holding a small traveling bag in his hand. It was dejectedly quiet, as the jail gong had commanded silence at 10 o'clock.

Every prisoner in "the hole"—a deeded cell on the first floor—who had howled with delirium tremens for two hours, made not a sound.

Silence for Minutes

The Governor's only word for several minutes was an exchange of greeting with a reporter.

"Well, I guess that's all," said Meredith, as he finished writing. "We'll take you out early in the morning, if we can."

"How early?" asked McCray. "As early as possible," was the reply.

Meredith then turned his prisoner over to Snider, in the outer office, and a second heavy iron-barred door closed behind him. In the second room a deputy filled out a jail card, showing the date of entrance.

The sheriff, followed by the Governor, was trapped up the iron stairs to the third floor. Stopping at the door to the big south room, in which eighty-four prisoners, mostly Federal offenders from Ft. Wayne and Indianapolis, the sheriff unlocked it.

The third door clanged behind the Governor of Indiana. Most of the other prisoners were asleep.

Greeted by Joseph Stokes

"Why! Hello there, Governor," said Joseph Stokes, Indianapolis druggist convicted in Federal Court of violating liquor laws, who is serving a six-months sentence, rising from his cot.

"Hello, Joe," replied McCray. Shortly after Sheriff Snider came downstairs, Meredith and Robinson came back, and asked if Robinson could speak to the Governor on State business.

"Through the bars," replied Snider. The Governor came down minus his collar and tie, and conversed in a low tone, through the grating of the second door, with Robinson.

Three important appointments to State posts were then announced. The Governor accepted the resignation, submitted March 10, of Thomas A. Riley, Indianapolis, as a member of the Industrial board. Charles Fox, of Terre Haute, was named for the remainder of Riley's term, which will expire March 24, 1925.

Riley was then appointed as a member of the Industrial board to succeed Fox, whose term expired March 16. Fox has been continuing to serve, pending appointment of his successor. The effect of the Governor's action will be to continue both Fox and Riley on the board.

The Governor also reappointed Clifford Funderburg, Huntington, as a member of the State board of education, for four years beginning May 1. Robinson then left and the Governor went to bed.

H. A. Bixby, Interior Decorator, Terre Haute, Ind., Felt Miserable for So Many Years That Life Was Hardly Worth Living, Gets Wonderful Relief From Serious Catarrhal Ailment of Head and Stomach Through the Use of Celebrated Todd's Tonic, Which Has the Strength-Building Qualities of Rare Old Wine.

"For the last twenty-one years of my forty-nine years on this earth, I have been troubled with severe catarrh of the head and stomach. I was in such a condition that I was miserable all the time. My back and limbs pained me so bad at times that I thought I would die and when I went to bed at night I would roll and tumble from one side of the bed to the other, unable to go to sleep. On some nights, my condition was so bad that I thought I would not be able to draw another breath. When everything looked most hopeless, some one recommended your Great Todd's Tonic. I earnestly thank goodness that Todd's Tonic was recommended to me, as it certainly put me back in condition to work. After only three bottles I have gained five and one-half pounds in weight. "Being an interior decorator and constantly in contact with paints and varnishes, a short time ago I contracted lead poisoning, which merely aggravated my already serious catarrh of the head and stomach. I took this tonic along with all of my other troubles, but since taking Todd's Tonic this, along with all of my other troubles, has disappeared and today I have the health I had fifteen years ago. I am so grateful for the results that I have received from this wonderful Tonic that I want every one of my fellow men who are looking for something that will really give results and restore to them their health as it has mine to know about your Tonic. It not only saved my health, but undoubtedly saved me a great deal of money, as I would have had to move to the coast for a change of climate on account of the terrible catarrh of the head from which I have suffered a long time."
