Martha Lee Her Column

'She Said She Said'

Dear Martha Lee: I am a girl 10 years old. I have been married two years. I have a younger 1 year old. My husband is 11.

Miss Lee, if you knew a woman of bad character had told your sister something about you, would you believe it or not?

He is so good to my husband. He treats us as a man treats his sweetheart. He is good to us. He always helps us stay home at night and gives us his wife's earnings.

I heard this just recently, but it happened to me before the baby came. I asked my husband whether it was true, and he said, "I swear it isn't so."

If that love and trust he can hardly believe it, I know I would feel better before what you have to say.

ANXIOUS WIFE.

You know, you love and you trust your husband. You know the character of the woman who told the story about him. Then how can you hesitate in deciding which to believe?

Your husband has given you every reason to believe him. Don't let gossip spoil your happiness.

Sighing for Sheik

Dear Martha Lee: I should like some advice on how to win over a very independent, indifferent, 1924 model of a man. He seems to be very popular, but is noted for being hard to get along with.

PEACHES.

If the man is "independent, indifferent and very popular," he probably tires quickly of the girl who pursues him. So, the safest bet in trying to attract him would be to pique his curiosity, and then try a little indifference yourself. Of course, it is necessary to be attractive, to begin with.

Parents Relent

Dear Miss Lee: I am 19 years old, a sophomore in college, and am very attractive. I have never won a beauty prize. I live with my parents, who are very strict. They don't even let me have a pet.

At a beauty dance, I met a fine-looking man, a senior 22 years old. I had several dates, and he seemed to be interested, because he was serious and very attentive, and we had five times together. My parents had me to have, even being friends with him, because of false reports they had heard of him. How can I gain his love, or even his friendship, again?

As you are a college girl, I suppose you appreciate the difference between what is slantly known as "honor" and real love, so that you do not believe every man who says he loves you. That is just the way of winning now, to take this man too seriously.

You see the man, invite him to call. If not, you might drop him a note asking him to tea some evening. That would be enough to show him that your parents no longer disapprove of your friendship with him. If he still cares to have your friendship, he will take advantage of the invitation.

LETTER FROM LESLIE PRESCOTT

TO JOHN ALDEN PRESCOTT

The train was very late, dear heart, consequently I got into New York just in time to drive directly to the dock. There was a bad accident on the tracks just in front of us, and we had to wait until it was cleared away. For the first time in my life, Jack dear, I got a little creepy feeling around my heart when I saw the long line of ambulances and undertaker wagons taking the people past me in the early morning from the wreck just ahead.

It was almost a stroke of providence that we did not run into this wreck, because our train stopped to send the signals and only stopped our train within a short distance of the other.

I wonder if I looked as strange to them as they did to me? Alice caught sight of me on the dock first, as the ship nosed into the slip, and honestly, Jack, I wouldn't have known her if she hadn't shouted my name over and over.

I got a rather morbid feeling, Jack, however, to have been in my compartment for the train to stop. I wondered just what you and little Jack would do if I never came back to you. Now that isn't a nice thing for an absent wife to write to her husband, is it? But I'm trying to tell you frankly just what I would see me again.

Jack, you wouldn't know Alice. (Copyright, 1924, NEA Service, Inc.)

Advice to Motorists
By Times Special

ANDERSON, Ind., May 10.—"Go Like Hell and See What You Get" is the advice which greets motorists approaching limits of the corporation town of Pendleton, Ind. It is a warning concealed as part of a campaign against automobile speeders and has been most effective.

As you are a college girl, I suppose you appreciate the difference between what is slantly known as "honor" and real love, so that you do not believe every man who says he loves you. That is just the way of winning now, to take this man too seriously.

You see the man, invite him to call. If not, you might drop him a note asking him to tea some evening.

Origin of Mother's Day Traces Back

THE origin of Mother's Day traces back to Civil War times when Mrs. Anna M. Jarvis, working among the soldiers of both the North and South, encouraged the soldiers to write back home to their mothers.

Mrs. Jarvis carried on the "write to mother" work after the war.

Then, upon her death, Miss Anna Jarvis, her daughter, continued with the spirit and founded Mother's Day and the Mother's Day International Association.

Through correspondence and personal contact she has spread the Mother's Day observance to all parts of the world.

Facts About Mother's Day

By MISS ANNA JARVIS
Founder of Mother's Day

THE second Sunday in May was picked as Mother's Day because it was midway between Easter and Children's Day.

With Mother's Day a day for homegoing, family reunions, Sunday was picked as the best day of the week for it.

While Mother's Day is for all members of the family, it was named after mother through highest regard for motherhood and because all other days are virtually father's days. For instance: Thanksgiving day for Pilgrim fathers; Fourth of July for patriotic fathers; Lincoln's birthday, Washington's birthday and New Year day for Father Time.

Some years ago Congress passed a resolution which makes it a custom for Old Glory to be displayed on Mother's Day.

The slogan of the Mother's Day International Association is: "In honor of the best mother who ever lived."—The Mother of Your Heart.

MOTHER by Hal Cochran

When the blues overtake you and gloominess reigns,

When you're sad and your heart is not light,

Who is it you turn to, and who takes the pains

To convince you that things will be right?

Who stands by your side when all others show scorn?

To whom are you right—though you're wrong?

Who's been your best friend since the day you were born

And has helped you to carry along?

Why ask, when we all know the answer quite plain.

There's one, and there'll ne'er be another,

Who gives all she has with no planning to gain—

The whole world is honoring Mother!

The future destiny of the child is always the work of the mother.—Napoleon.

They say that man is mighty
He governs land and sea,
He wields a mighty scepter
Or lesser powers that be;

But a mightier power and stronger
Man from his throne has hurl'd—
For the hand that rocks the cradle
Is the hand that rules the world.

—William Ross Wallace.

No language can express the power and beauty and heroism of a mother's love.—Chapin.

The future destiny of the child is always the work of the mother.—Napoleon.

Unhappy is the man for whom his own mother has not made all other mothers venerable.—Richter.

If there be aught surpassing human deed or word or thought it is a mother's love.—Marchioness de Spadara.

When God thought of mother He must have laughed with satisfaction, and framed it quickly—so cloth, so deep, so divine, so full of soul, power and beauty, was the conception.—Henry Ward Beecher.

There is in all this cold and hollow world no fount of deep, strong, deathless love, save that within a mother's heart.—Mrs. Hemans.

The instruction received at the mother's knee, and the paternal lessons, together with the pious and sweet souvenirs of the fireside, are never effaced entirely from the soul.—Lamennais.

Who can help me when I fall, And who would some pretty story tell, Or kiss the place to make it well?

Founder of Mother's Day Boston's Guest

MISS ANNA JARVIS, founder of Mother's Day, will be the honored guest of Boston, Mass., on May 11 when that city celebrates Mother's Day in a monster gathering on the historical Boston commons.

The celebration is under the auspices of the Volunteers of America and Miss Jarvis' invitation came from Mayor James M. Curley.

Mother's Day Message

President Coolidge in a letter to Miss Anna Jarvis, founder of Mother's Day, said:

ATTENTION has been brought to the fact that on Sunday, May 11, the annual observance of Mother's Day will be held throughout the country. Indications are, I am informed, that the day will be made an occasion for appropriate commemoration in all parts of the Nation.

This annual event has come, in recent years, to be one of the wildest recognized commemorative occasions, and I am glad to give my endorsement to the sentiments which have inspired this attitude.

The reverential recognition of the debt which is due a good mother or to her memory, is worthy of the best sentiments of a great people.

No community, no State, however great and powerful, will ever rise superior to its obligations to those who have contributed to framing its earliest ideals and its best aspirations. For these, our debt will ever run to the mothers and the motherhood of the Nation. That debt we cannot too often or too earnestly acknowledge.

Local Women to Attend

Indianapolis women who will attend the convention are Mrs. Thomas Henry Mullins, Mrs. Walter S. Greenough, Mrs. Isaac Born, Mrs. W. T. Barnes, Mrs. Iris M. Holmes, Mrs. S. E. Perkins, Miss Helen Hand and Mrs. Edith Evans.

There are plans being made for 300 persons.
