

APPEAL IS MADE FOR MOTOR RACE LAP-PRIZE CASH

A. L. Block Issues Statement Asking Public to Contribute.

A. L. Block, president of L. Strauss & Co., today issued a statement calling upon all business people and individuals to assist in the movement to raise $10,000 in lap prize awards for the Speedway races. He said:

"Indianapolis people cannot do too much toward helping the daring drivers whose feats have made the city internationally known and whose great skill and experimentation have done so much to lift the standard of the automobile.

Thousands of Persons

"The Indianapolis Motor Speedway annually brings thousands upon thousands of visitors to our city who otherwise most probably would not visit Indianapolis and has served to bring the city before the nations of the world in a most favorable manner.

"From a selfish standpoint the annual Speedway races bring thousands of dollars into Indianapolis, but I have never attempted to reduce this problem to figures, for I have preferred to consider the very favorable publicity which the classic affords the city rather than its mercenary aspects.

Contributions Asked

"A committee from the Chamber of Commerce headed by Austin J. Edwards, is soliciting contributions to the lap fund, and I hold it most desirable for every one who possibly can to contribute to this fund which helps in a small way to compensate the drivers for the tremendous hazard as well as their contribution to the automobile world.

"My greatest hope is that each lap will have its award, that the drivers may not think us ungrateful for their efforts."

MINORITY REPORT ASSAILS WHEELER

Senator Sterling Says Indictment Was Justified.

By United Press
WASHINGTON, May 19.—Indictment of Senator Wheeler of Montana by a Montana grand jury was "justified by the evidence," Senator Sterling, Republican, South Dakota, declared in a minority report today playing the Borah committee, which investigated it, for "encroaching on the functions of the courts."

Wheeler was "wholly exonerated" by the committee in a report last Wednesday. Sterling said he was impelled by a sense of duty under the facts to dissent from the majority and declared he would be derelict in his duties if he did not express a contrary view.

CITIZEN COMPLAINS ABOUT POLICEMAN

Says Officer Promised 'Write-up' in Paper.

Complaint by Louis Heid, 1946 Ludlow St., that Patrolman Moninger forced him to give up a baseball that came into the yard of his mother, Mrs. Josephine Heid, 67, resulted today in Prosecutor William Remy turning the report over to Chief of Police Rikhoff.

Young men playing ball in the street with a baseball belonging to small boys persisted in jumping the fence to retrieve fouls, Remy was told, much to the annoyance of Mrs. Heid. On one occasion when she took the ball, Patrolman Moninger, the ball's owner, armed with a ball bat and brick, forced its return, it was said.

The policeman threatened the Heid family with arrest and a "good write-up" of the arrest in the paper," Heid told the prosecutor.

WOMAN SENT TO JAIL

Alleged Shoplifter Goes to Cell Pending Sentence.

Despite lamentations and many tears, Special Criminal Court Judge Frank A. Symmes ordered Mrs. Florence Simmons, 1417 St. Peter St., locked in the county jail today until 11 o'clock Tuesday morning while he heard her case.

She was tried on charges of shoplifting. Three silk waists were stolen from the Indiana Dry Goods store by the prisoner, it is alleged.

"Oh, sir, just give me a chance," sobbed the defendant. "I swear I won't do it again. May the Lord forgive me."

"No, you'll have to go with the sheriff," replied Judge Symmes. "All the crying in the world won't help you. You know you served six months once before for shoplifting."

FORBES CASE CONTINUED

Move to Quash Graft Indictments Delayed for Month.

By United Press
CHICAGO, May 19.—Due to a congested calendar, Federal Judge Carpenter today continued to June 23 arguments to quash the indictments charging Charles R. Forbes, former head of the Veterans Bureau, and J. W. Thompson, St. Louis, head of a contracting company, in connection with an alleged graft in Veterans' Bureau affairs.

De Pauw Girl Student Stars Don't Even Wear Specs

LEFT TO RIGHT, CORNELIA ALLEN, ELAINE CARSON, SARAH ST. JOHNSON, KATHERINE THOMPSON, DOROTHY RIST AND LUCILLE RHODES.

By Times Special
GREENCASTLE, Ind., May 19.—Not very long ago all college students elected to Phi Beta Kappa were looked upon as "grinds." They were pictured as somber, dressed characters with hair slicked back and with the ever present spectacles. Needless to say they were not popular. Compare with the condition today. Among the students elected to the scholastic honor this year at De Pauw University are the young women pictured above. They are all very active on the campus and are among the college's most popular women. The girls pictured are Sarah St. John, Salem; Cornelia Allen, Greencastle; Lucille Rhodes, Auburn; Katherine Thompson, Noblesville; Dorothy Rist, Hammond; and Elaine Carson, Spartansburg, S. C.

Troubled

MRS. EVELYN ROSE WRIGHT

I. N. Rose, father of Mrs. Evelyn Rose Wright, 18, 516 N. Senate Ave., came all the way from Lexington, Ky., to tell police her name should be Evelyn Rose.

Evelyn and Frank Wright, held by police, were married at Jeffersonville, Ind., six months ago. Rose says he could find no record of it and that Wright has a wife in Lexington. Mrs. Wright says she doesn't believe it.

JEALOUS, HURLS ACID; MAN DIES

Woman Held on Murder Charge in Widower's Death.

By United Press
COLUMBUS, Ohio, May 19.—Mrs. Grace Dolby, 35, was arrested in a rooming house here today and held on charge of murder in the death of George E. Hackney, a widower and father of four children.

Jealous of his attentions to other women, Mrs. Dolby, who has a husband and four sons, threw acid in Hackney's face in a motion picture theater last night, causing burns and shock from which he died on the way to a hospital.

"I just read that he was dead and was going to turn on the gas," Mrs. Dolby told police as they broke into her room.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.

Mrs. Dolby confessed she had been "keeping company" with Hackney for three years and spent some time with him in St. Louis last summer. Her husband, hearing of this, filed suit for divorce, but later withdrew it when she returned.