

COUNTY AT ODDS OVER STATEMENT JULIETTA BROKE

President of Commissioners
Says Sunnyside Hospital
Involved, Too.

County officials today were at odds with the announcement by John Kitley, president of the commissioners, that Julietta county insane asylum has no money in the repair fund, and another by Cassius L. Hogle, president of the county council, that the council will appropriate none.

Kitley said the milk supply for Sunnyside, county tuberculosis hospital, cannot be delivered from Julietta, where the county keeps its cows, because the driver is broken, and there is no money to fix it. The laundry for Sunnyside, at Julietta, is in similar position.

Hogle announced Dr. Benjamin S. Potter, superintendent of Julietta, had an appropriation Jan. 1 and spent it all. Auditor Harry Dunn's books show there was $679.56 in the fund to start the year. It is all spent except $15.

Potter today reported to the commissioners, his institution needs $1,500 for repairs immediately, and that some of the outbuildings have had no work on for seven years. County councilmen in their last meeting refused to make an emergency appropriation, stating they did not think it necessary.

Blames Politics

"It's all politics," said Kitley. "Holding up these two institutions to put the commissioners in a bad light."

Hogle is Republican candidate for county commissioner opposing Kitley, Democrat, for re-election.

ALLIES ARE RECONCILED

France-England Have Settled Differences, Herriot Says.

By United Press
PARIS, July 11.—Relations between France and England were reconciled during the recent conversations between Premier Herriot and Prime Minister MacDonald in England. Herriot said in answer to interpellations in the senate today.

"The program of the committee of experts headed by General Dawes of the United States (for settlement of German reparations) is not perfect," the premier admitted, "we must remember that the first duty of the present government was to restore cordial Franco-British relations."

Refused Smoke, Bam!

A. J. Oliver, 437½ Massachusetts Ave., didn't like the way a colored man said: "Give me a cigarette," and refused. "The man struck him and ran, he told police. The encounter occurred in front of 410 N. Senate Ave."

Superintendent Didn't Like Her Bob

Away from work she sported a shingle bob. But on duty, Mabel Shelborne, student nurse in Grant hospital in Columbus, Ohio, disguised her abbreviated tresses by "doing it up" with the aid of switches and nets. None of her superiors learned her secret until Miss Shelborne was taken ill and sent to bed. Then, when her false makeup was revealed, Miss Mary A. Jamieson, hospital superintendent, ordered a general inspection of all student nurses. And twelve others, besides Miss Shelborne, were suspended. These pictures show the styles Miss Shelborne followed on and off duty.

WHEN IN DOUBT GO TO LIBRARIAN

That's Attitude of Readers, Variety of Questions Asked at Indianapolis Business Branch Shows.

"Say, can you find me a picture of chickens eating?"

"I want to know the effect of the World War on economical conditions in the United States."

"Can you refer me to a book containing the history of Wall Street?"

Questions more puzzling than an income tax questionnaire are hurled daily at Miss Ethel Cleland, librarian of the Indianapolis Business Branch Library, on the first floor of the school administration building, Ohio and Meridian Sts.

And Miss Cleland, or her assistant, Miss Dena Babcock, assistant librarian, is able to answer almost all of them by referring to books, magazines, pamphlets or clippings on file.

Varied Service

The library is virtually a filling station of information in the heart of Indianapolis, serving business men and women. From its shelves of more than 4,500 books an average of 180 readers take books each day. Books are classified on general economics, banking, investments, finance, corporations, business law, insurance, foreign trade, railroads, accounting, marketing, merchandising.

When the library opened Feb. 1, 1918, four months after the removal of the Central Library to its present site on St. Clair St., between Pennsylvania and Meridian Sts., it inherited practically all its furniture and equipment from the old library. Thus, with the purchase of a few additional necessities, the library from the beginning was able to operate at little cost.

The Indianapolis business library ranks as one of the best and largest in the country. Libraries operated primarily for giving information along business lines have developed only during the past fifteen years.

GOOD GRACIOUS, AGNES!

Counter Men Hard Put to Keep Hands Off.

Counter men at a downtown dairy luncheon displayed anguish when this happened:

A tall, muscular man, with hair on his hands, walked in, accompanied by a small, wizened fellow.

The little fellow spoke first, crowding the big man out of his way. "Cuppa coffee, ham sandwich," he growled.

The big man hung back, bit his finger nails and then in a weak treble: "Deah, me! I don't know what I want. I don't see any salads."

He's for 'Im

By United Press
LOCUST VALLEY, N. Y., July 11.—If the saying that no man is a hero to his valet may be extended to include his butler, then John W. Davis is an exception indeed.

For the haughty, mutton-chopped, English mentor of the Davis household unbent today and said:

"Mr. Davis, E's the finest man that ever lived, upon my word. I'd work my fingers to the bone for 'im. 'E's that kind as appreciates h'everything you do. Of course I mean to say, I always does my best, but none of my masters ever was so h'appreciative. We're all what you h'Americans call crazy about 'im. 'E's the grytest man in the world."

DIGS DAILY DAILY DEEP

Governor Declares There's Too Much Statehouse Loading.

By Times Staff Correspondent
WEST BADEN HOTEL, July 11.—An impending house cleaning at the Statehouse was threatened today by Governor Branch.

And all this because the clerks at the Statehouse like their "daily daily" at the soda, untain in the lobby. The Governor here to attend the Republican Editors' meeting, declared 200 clerks spend from fifteen minutes to an hour daily at the soda fountain.

"Why I never saw so much loafing on a job in my life," he said. "If we haven't way to keep them busy we'd better fire a lot of them. The Governor meant it as a friendly word of warning."

Youth Quarrels for Dog; Hangs

By United Press

ALLEY FIELD, Quebec, July 11.—An American youth who shot a French-Canadian in a tavern brawl over the merits of a hound dog, was hanged here today, despite efforts of his friends, attorneys and the American Government to save his life.

Sentence of death passed upon Walter Muir, 21-year-old New Yorker, for killing Henri Laviolette, was carried out shortly after daybreak, while the roof of a factory adjoining the jail yard groaned beneath a load of spectators.

The young man's mother, Mrs. Mary Muir of New York, spent Thursday evening with him and he faced the scaffold courageously at dawn. Local sentiment favored the execution.

Lord Byng, the Governor-General, refused to the last to grant a reprieve. Muir's attorneys had sought a stay of execution on ground new evidence had been unearthed.

The State Department at Washington had requested executive clemency. New Yorkers took an active interest in the case, claiming the offense was manslaughter, not murder.

EXPLANATION IS USELESS

Judge Sentences Woman on Blind Tiger Charge.

Explanation that her son used white mule to masquerade the taste of bad medicine, didn't influence City Judge Delbert O. Wilmett today. He fined Mrs. Josie Darnell, colored, 2954 Martindale Ave., $100 and costs and sentenced her thirty days in Women's Prison on a blind tiger charge.

Mule was in the right place, but it wasn't the right kind of mule that officers found in a stall in livery stable at 415 W. Maryland St., July 1. Carl Peirce, 4218 Schofield St., keeper, was fined $300 and costs and sentenced ninety days at Indiana State Farm.

Ed Brown, colored, 308 N. Senate Ave., was bound over to grand jury under high bond. Officers confiscated a quantity of liquor in a raid on his home June 11.

SOME TIME IN FUTURE

Benefits Expected From Survey of Traffic Expert.

No immediate benefits to the city of the traffic survey of J. Rowland Bibbins, expert engineer of Washington, D. C., are in prospect, although employees of the city plan commission rapidly are working out suggestions in Bibbins' recommendations.

City officials have been talking traffic counts on east side streets entering Massachusetts Ave. to get ideas on what street widening program will be necessary. It is understood that Tenth, Michigan and New York Sts. are under most serious consideration.
