

BOULEVARD HALT NEAR END; WAY ORDERED CLEAR

Park Board Passes Resolution for Sale of City Houses.

The end of the long delay in construction of Pleasant Run Blvd., appeared near today following an order of the city park board to sell the 179 houses along the boulevard site at public auction and clear ground for the boulevard between Prospect and Shelby Sts.

The move to authorize the sale was made by Emsley W. Johnson, after several south siders had appeared to protest against the delay. Recent surveys of The Times revealed that the city was repairing the houses it purchased and renting them out to new tenants. Park board officials, however, explained that this arrangement was only temporary until property abstracts were in.

No Opposition in Council

The resolution passed by the board authorizes an ordinance to be introduced in the city council approving the sale. Little opposition is expected in the council, since delay in building the boulevard has already been criticized by councilmen.

Houses will be sold by the block to lumber companies who must wreck them and remove all material. Mayor Shank will be asked to re-enter his profession as an auctioneer to cry the sale.

Following the removal of the houses, the sanitary board will construct the Pleasant Run interceptor sewer system which will drain the district from Irvington to White River.

Land Purchase Urged

A new resolution for purchase of land at Broad Ripple was introduced after Park Commissioner Johnson said the city was being "held up" by appraisers' prices. The new resolution calls for purchase of only forty acres of land bordering on the river north of the amusement features.

On recommendation of R. Walter Jarvis, park superintendent, the board issued an order prohibiting children on city tennis courts after 6 p. m., giving that time to adults for recreation after working hours.

ness must confine himself to this case," Crowe was sustained.

"What is the condition of those boys," the judge asked. "If there is anything wrong with the boys, let us hear about it."

Fighting every step of the way, Crowe again objected to a hypothetical question not dealing with the boys but the court overruled it.

Dr. White went into technical explanation of how alienists arrive at their conclusions, through the medium of constant observation, questioning, noting the reactions and other forms.

Crowe's next objection was that the examination of Dr. White dealt with insanity and that it should therefore be stricken from the records and he should not be allowed to testify further.

"Overruled," the judge spoke sharply and ordered the examination of the witness to continue.

Drs. William O. Krehm and William D. Singer, State alienists, sat next to Crowe, prompting him and interrupting answers made by the witness.

"Did you examine the defendants,"

Children Grow Strong at Camp Ida Wineman

SETTING-UP EXERCISES

Jewish children of Indianapolis who are suffering from malnutrition, and mothers who need a rest, find a pleasant home at the Camp Ida Wineman, north of Broad Ripple on White River, conducted by the Indianapolis Jewish Federation.

The camp, which has six cottages and a kitchen, is delightfully located and affords splendid outdoor living conditions.

Camp attendants are kept on the alert from early morning to late at night. The daily program includes setting-up exercises, games, contests, swimming and a two-hour rest period in the afternoon, when they are supposed to sleep. Milk twice a day and medical attention keep them in good physical condition. Every Wednesday night an original song contest is held around a big bonfire. The public library furnishes 400 books for the children.

"Ann T. Dirt" is the name of the shower house, where they receive a good "scrubbing" three times a week.

Sixteen boys live at "Ruff House" cottage, and attendants say the place lives up to its name. The cottage, which houses twenty-two girls is called "Chicken Coop."

Camp personnel: Miss Lucille Goldstone, camp director; Alan Cleve, recreational director; Miss Hattie Feldman, assistant, and Dr. Harry Jacobs, chairman camp committee. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Smith, who prepare three wholesome meals a day, are popular.

He spent considerable time indulging in these phantasies.

In one of the phantasies Loeb pictured himself as being in jail with men and women looking through and commenting on him as a great criminal. He pictured himself as being abused or beaten. He imagined himself digging a hole in the corner of the yard and laying in it the same as he did in bed.

Another of his phantasies was the thought of himself as a great criminal. He considered himself the master criminal mind of the century. He imagined himself controlling large bands of desperate criminals. He imagined himself a physical weakling, lying in a sick bed, but his great mind so wonderful that criminals came to him for advice and consultation and he directed their underworld activities.

"I found that Dickie, in order to escape the rigid discipline of his mother, fell into the habit of telling lies. At the age of 15 he suffered a cerebral contusion caused by an automobile accident.

"In college, Dickie had a rather unusual career. He was a brilliant student and is particularly interesting to know that he was interested especially in the history of the South. He followed closely the career of John C. Calhoun and looked upon him as an orator and a defender of a lost cause."

Dr. White said that in a discussion of morals with Loeb, Loeb told him that he believed that when a man was not making enough money at his occupation to properly support himself, he had a perfect right to get more money in any way that he could.

"Least Resistance"

"I found that in his course of study he followed the lines of least resistance," White continued. "He took things as they came. He had no definite plan for his life and had no concern for what he would do when his college days were over."

"During this period he says that his drinking helped to dull his self criticism. He had no interest in life and felt a distinct inferiority. Even as a child he felt he was not wanted in his home. There was no one to whom he could go with his childish questions and problems."

"During his college days, his lying continued. Whereas he lied negatively as a child, he now lied positively, getting out of all sorts of scrapes by lies."

Loeb had developed a habit of lying to a point where it no longer came within the province of lying but developed into a pathological case, the witness said.

"Dickie," the doctor said, "built up all sorts of impossible situations in his mind and he lived in these situations. He did this so long and so frequently that toward the end he could not distinguish between truth and falsehood."

Phantasy Life

"He developed a phantasy life. Dickie himself called it picturization."

PRETTY TELLER CAUSES ARREST IN CHECK CASE

Young Man Held Under $5,000 Bond Pending Investigation.

Intuition and quick wit of Miss Gertrude Moss, 27, of 1020 Central Ave., pretty paying teller at the State Savings and Trust Company, today saved the bank from a probable $150 loss, and resulted in the arrest of a man, giving his name as Earl A. Davis, 20, detained under $5,000 bond on a vagrancy charge.

On July 19, Davis, giving his address as 415 W. Walnut St., came to Miss Moss and deposited $100 in cash. On July 23, she said, he deposited a $200 check, drawn on the Monongahela Trust Company, Homestead, W. Va.

MISS GERTRUDE MOSS

Thursday, Miss Moss stated, Davis presented a check for $150, asking $100 cash with the balance to be deposited. Miss Moss said she gave him the $100, same amount he had previously deposited in cash.

Today Miss Moss said when Davis appeared to cash a check for $150, drawn on the Farmers Trust Company, Crawfordsville, Ind., she had a premonition something was wrong.

Miss Moss stated that the man got nervous, which confirmed her suspicions. She went to Weatherholt who called Harry Webster, detective, and police. When Detectives Brickley and Finerman arrived Webster had Davis in custody.

Webster said he had complaining as to the same check operation from Mishawaka, Marion and Elkhart. Davis had $800, police said.

Deposits at Another Bank

F. F. Wecher of the Fletcher American National Bank identified Davis as the man who had made a deposit at his bank.

Webster said he had information that a woman, posing as Davis' wife, was working with him. He had complaints of her activities from Washington and Louisville, Ky. Police are seeking her.

STUDY WAYS AND MEANS

Commission Continues Work Preliminary to Phone Valuation.

Conference on procedure to be followed in inventory and appraisal of the Indiana Bell Telephone Company property in the State continued today between the public service commission and Taylor E. Groninger, legal counsel; Benjamin Perk, accountant, and Edward W. Bemis, engineer, employed for the valuation.

Preliminaries to the actual work include arrangement of a complicated system of forms and records. The actual field work of inventory and appraisal will not take place until Bemis and Earl Carter, commission engineer, have augmented their staff by several engineering assistants. Work of establishing a tabulation system will be complete next week.

Be-e-e-ware!

Sh-h-h! Real quiet. The city may tip-toe on the unsuspecting property owners and take $15,000 from them. Look out!

It's a deep, dark scheme, but it's under way. City officials have been told by real estate men there are 15,000 vacant lots in Indianapolis.

Now, the city sometimes remembers to cut weeds for delinquent property owners and charge them $3 a lot. But it only costs the city $2 to cut them. There you are. Receipts, $45,000. Paid out $30,000. Profit, $15,000.

But that's figuring the city will do the work and can collect the money. Both are risky. City officials don't say what they will do with the $15,000.

FISHER IN DISPUTE

Value of 1,600 Acres of Long Island Land Is Involved.

Carl G. Fisher, formerly of Indianapolis, founder of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, and the Long Island State park commission of New York, are in a dispute of serious proportions over the value of 1,600 acres of Long Island land, according to press dispatches.

The commission has instituted condemnation proceedings in order to acquire the property. Fisher has announced he will appeal to Governor Alfred Smith.

Fisher purchased the land to build a summer resort. Park commission officials assert Fisher has asked $300 for some of the land which they say is not worth more than $75 an acre.

GARAGE PROBE DELAYED

Grand Jury Adjourns Without Taking Action.

There will be no investigation of the garage of the State highway commission before September. This became certain today when the grand jury adjourned until Sept. 2 after returning seventeen indictments against nineteen defendants, to Frank A. Symmes, judge pro tem, in Criminal Court.

William H. Remy, prosecutor, said he will prepare to present the case as soon as possible after the jury reconvenes.

Fire Origin Investigated

Investigation is being made today to determine the origin of a fire Thursday that damaged a barn occupied by Ernest Holey, in the rear of 927 N. West St. Damage was estimated at $500.
