

TWO AMERICANS ATTEND ANNUAL LEAGUE MEETING

Delegates From Nations Gather for Momentous Session at Geneva.

By HENRY WOOD, United Press Staff Correspondent GENEVA, Sept. 1.—The assembly of the League of Nations met in its regular annual session today, with Paul Hymans of Belgium president.

The Americans present were Senator McKinley and Representative Burton. Hymans delivered the opening address, reviewing the work of the league during 1923, including the opening of the court of international justice at The Hague and the sessions of the league council on the questions of limitations of armaments, the opium traffic, the trade in white slaves.

The league has settled half a dozen dangerous European disputes, he pointed out, and its commission in intellectual cooperation has started work with the Argentine republic participating.

From the tribune of the assembly in the famous Reformation Hall, built to commemorate the 400th anniversary of Calvin, three prime ministers of England, France and Italy have announced their intention of declaring publicly the newer and more important role which the league will play in maintenance of international peace.

Premier MacDonald of Britain expects to start here Tuesday, according to word from London.

Delegations were present from over fifty of the fifty-four states composing the league, while unofficial delegates were present from virtually every state that is not a member, notably the United States, Germany and Russia.

Argentine May Return
The Argentine seats which have been vacant ever since the Argentine delegation withdrew from the first assembly, continued to face the president "vacantly" in the face, but assurances were received that before the next assembly Argentine will in all probability be represented by a full delegation such as she already sent this year to the International Labor Bureau, which makes up part of the league.

In honor of the three allied prime ministers, who constitute the highest heads of governments that have ever come to a league assembly, except for the presence last year of President Cosgrave of the Irish Free State, Geneva was a fairland of banner and flags of virtually every nation in the world. Although the United States is not a member of the league, the American flag rivaled those of other nations. The assembly delegations for the first time in going to the Secretariat also passed along the new "Quai du President Wilson," which Geneva inaugurated the past year, with its tablet walling into the Secretariat terrace announcing that the name of the quai had been changed in honor of President Wilson, "Founder of the League of Nations."

Epoch-Making Gathering
That the present assembly will mark definitely the turning point in the league is the declaration of every delegation present. MacDonald's declaration, that the whole future foreign policy of England will be based upon the League; with France openly declaring that she will endeavor to settle her greatest question—namely, that of national security—through the League, and with Italy seeking also a new field of international importance through the League, Leagueurs declare that the present assembly will be epoch-making in the history of the world. In addition, the present assembly is also scheduled to perfect the arrangements whereby the League will take over from the allies the military control of Germany, Austria, Hungary and Bulgaria, which alone, it is declared, places the whole future peace of Europe largely in the hands of the League, and increases immensely the prestige and international importance of the latter.

POSTAL WORKERS WANT WAGE BILL

Begin Nation-Wide Drive for Its Support.

By United Press WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 1.—National representatives of postal employees at a conference here today decided to wage a vigorous fight for passage through Congress in December of the postal salary bill, Senate Bill No. 1893, known as the Kelly-Edge Bill.

Spokesmen for the National Association of Letter Carriers, National Federation of Postoffice Clerks, Railway Mail Association, and the National League of District Postmasters pledged the active support of their respective groups to a nationwide educational campaign for public support of the bill, which passed Congress by overwhelming majorities at the last session, and was vetoed by President Coolidge.

The opinion was expressed at the conference that this bill more nearly meets the needs of the postal workers than any other measure, and its eventual passage can be effected through the proposed educational campaign to acquaint the public with all facts.

Postal pay standards, it was stated, have not kept pace with rising living costs and Congress will be asked to alleviate the unsatisfactory conditions of postal employment by promptly taking up this bill for passage.

Handlon was driving west on Thirty-Eighth St., between the fair-ground and College Ave., with others in his auto. As a sedan, with two elderly people in the front and two boys behind passed, occupants of the Handlon car saw one of the boys toss out an object, apparently with no intent to hit the other car. Before he died, Handlon told an inquest at the city hospital some one threw a tomato through his windshield, but investigation showed a tomato instead.

Handlon is survived by a wife, Mrs. Alice Handlon.

R. C. Hiller says, "We are here to serve you and serve you well. We kinds of prices for your office supplies, Hiller Office Supply Company, 28 S. Pennsylvania St., urges you to through a catalogue and paying all should like to have the same relation with our customers as a lawyer has to his clients." The service offered by this concern assures you of entire satisfaction. You are urged to drop in and "look around" to see what they have that may suit your needs. They urge you consult with them and benefit by their knowledge of efficient offices. This in the long run, says Mr. Hiller, will be cheaper and more desirable all around.

He is eager to tell office managers about the Duplex system because, he declares, it is the best on the market. Without obligation on the part of customers he is willing to explain its selling points.

COMPANY HANDLES ACTORS' LUGGAGE

Absolute dependability must be assured theatrical companies when their baggage is left in the hands of a transfer establishment. The Terminal Transfer and Baggage Company, 365 S. Meridian St., handles the luggage of the companies appearing at the Lyric and also transfers films for Famous Players Lasky and Realcraft films corporations.

Two large trucks and two smaller ones are on the go constantly, says Frank Weaver, manager. There is effort made to render service that may be depended upon.

Saturday nights when theater people are moving out and Sunday morning when they are moving in there are moments of concern, no doubt, but the theatrical business of this transfer company has been such that their attention to detail has essentially become a part of it.
