

UNCLE SAM GOING TO CHECK UP ON TRAFFIC VIOLATOR

Questionnaires Sent for Statistics to Curb Accidents.

By Times Special
WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—"Uncle Sam is going to check up on the traffic law violator."

The national conference on street and highway safety, working under the direction of Secretary of Commerce Hoover, has sent out questionnaires to several hundred communities in an effort to get statistics that will serve as a guide toward reduction of auto accidents.

In most cases police departments will gather the information. The reports will show the age, color, sex and business of violators, whether they can read traffic signs in English, whether they own real estate or other property, and whether they carry insurance on their machines.

Another line of questions will ask how much driving experience the violator has had, whether he drives his own machine and whether it was bought new or second-hand, together with its age. The report will also show if the motorist is a professional chauffeur or a private driver.

Records of previous accidents will be required in order to ascertain if he is a reckless driver. The conference will attempt to analyze the reports and draw therefrom definite recommendations for remedial measures.

SEPARATE UNITS OUTSIDE LIMIT

Ogden Rules Bonds Not to Be Considered in Total.

Bonded indebtedness of separate city taxing units is a separate debt, and should not be included in the borrowing limit of 2 per cent of the assessed property valuation of the general city.

This was the opinion of James M. Ogden, city corporation counsel, submitted to Mayor Shank today, after it was found Tuesday that the total bonded indebtedness of all units was over the 2 per cent limit.

Although this opinion gives the general city a margin of nearly $6,000,000 on which it can issue bonds, it is adverse to the mayor's plan of reserving the city charter eliminating separate taxing units.

The mayor insisted that moves to have the charter rewritten continue.
