

ALL HOOSIERDOM ANSWERS CALL ON DEFENSE DAY

Local Celebration Greatest Patriotic Affair in Years.

Defense Test day celebrations in Indiana Friday brought forth a tremendous outburst of patriotic sentiment in all parts of the State, according to word received today by Maurice E. Tennant, State chairman.

Despite adverse weather conditions in Indianapolis and many other cities the greatest crowds for a military affair since Armistice day, Nov. 11, 1918, turned out and rain failed to dampen the ardor of marchers and spectators.

Programs varied widely in different cities, mass meetings, parades and speechmaking being among the forms which the celebration took. In many places, half holidays were declared, business houses and schools being closed during the afternoon.

Largest Since Homecoming

The Indianapolis celebration was the largest patriotic demonstration since Homecoming day in 1919.

The business-like appearance of the Indiana National Guard units was the cause of the wide comment. Those among the spectators who remembered the badly drilled, poorly equipped militia units of a few years ago were pleasantly surprised by the up-to-date, complete equipment of the guard units. They marched with a precision comparable to that of the splendidly appearing regular army infantry and artillery units from Ft. Benjamin Harrison.

Crowds Line Route

Large crowds lined the route of the parade and the spectators stuck to the end, despite the cold drizzle which fell throughout the afternoon. The crowd was not a demonstrative one, the only spontaneous outburst of applause coming when twenty-one veterans of the Civil War, feeble in body but with courage unabated, marched by, undaunted by the soaking rain.

The spectators while not outwardly demonstrative were observant and clearly were impressed with the significance of the occasion.

DRUGGIST SUCCUMBS

Marcus D. Wyson, 51, proprietor of a drug store at 802 W. Twenty-Seventh St., died late Friday at the Methodist Hospital after a long illness.

Mr. Wyson, who had been a resident of Indianapolis for thirty-two years, had been at the Twenty-Seventh St. address for twelve years.

The widow, one daughter, Miss Fern, a brother, Bedford, and three sisters, Mrs. Edna Greenough, Mrs. Ella Grooms, all of Indianapolis, and Mrs. Alida Ashbaugh of Mt. Pleasant, Ohio, survive.

YOUNG COUPLE DETERMINED TO REMAIN MARRIED

Chicago Society Matron
Wants Son's Union
Annulled.

Mrs. Manfred Landis, Chicago society woman, may get the marriage of her son, Theldon, to Miss Margaret Wiley, 19, of 1605 Wade St., annulled, but they'll do it all over again, Mrs. Theldon Landis indicated today.

Theldon Landis is the nephew of Keneas Mountain Landis, the baseball czar.

Married at Anderson

The couple were married at Anderson, Ind., July 23. The girl says she gave her address as Indianapolis, but the clerk made it Anderson in issuing the license. Indiana law requires that marriage licenses be obtained in the county in which the bride resides. The law, however, does not specify any length of residence and it is said to be legally possible for a girl to become a resident of another county upon an instant's notice.

According to a dispatch, Mrs. Manfred Landis was in Anderson Friday looking up the records.

Should the mother obtain an annulment the couple could be remarried without difficulty, since Theldon Landis is said to be 21 years old.

Both Are Employed

Mrs. Theldon Landis was at work today at the Reserve Loan Life Insurance Company, 420 N. Pennsylvania St., where she is a stenographer. Her husband works at the Van Camp packing plant. They plan to continue to live here, Mrs. Landis said. She would not tell how she met her husband, but said he had called upon her frequently at her home before the elopement.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Albert Wiley, mother of the bride, resented the activity of Mrs. Manfred Landis. She said that she and her husband had been just as much opposed to the marriage as the Chicago mother, but that now she intended to stand by her daughter.

DRUG STORE ROSES FROSTED BY TALK

Methodists Told American Woman Biggest Problem Today—Solve That and All Is Solved.

"A man likes the rose on a woman's cheek until he finds out she gets it out of a little box at the drug store—then he doesn't like to get it all over himself by fooling around," Dr. George R. Stuart, lecturer of Birmingham, Ala., declared Friday night in a lecture at the Methodist conference at Roberts Park M. E. Church.

"I have seen more paint on virtuous women's faces in the last five years than all the rest of my life," he said.

Motherhood Biggest Job

"Great men and great women are exceptions. If women go off their jobs—the greatest in the world—who'll all then?"

Dr. Stuart said God gave woman every big constructive job and made man the headcarrier.

"The hope of the world is mother—the old-fashioned mother," declared Dr. Stuart denouncing the "little floppy, card playing, bobbed hair type" of woman.

"We're living downtown today, and when we give up the table and eat at cafeterias, the home is gone," he said.

Magazines Criticized

Dr. Stuart said when he wanted to know the "trend of things" he studied full page cartoons in periodicals. He rapped periodicals with vulgar jokes, and lascivious pictures, declaring they should be barred from the mails.

Taking examples from nature the speaker proved that "God placed man and woman in distinct spheres." The American woman is the biggest question of the day, "you settle that and you settle everything," declared Dr. Stuart.

Bishop Joseph F. Berry, in introducing the speaker, said that Dr. Stuart was a strong advocate of uniting the Methodist Church North and South.

For at least women may become members of the Journeyman Barbers International Union. So the men barbers voted, after long and heated discussion, at their convention at the Athenaeum Friday.

CIVIC LEADERS ASK FOR NEW MARKET HOUSE

John F. White Gives Reasons to Councilmen at Joint Meeting.

Members of the city market commission, appointed by Mayor Shank three years ago, met with city councilmen and members of the Indianapolis Federation of Community Civic Clubs at the Chamber of Commerce Friday night and debated the question of whether the city should build a new market house or remodel the present one.

John F. White, of the market commission, declared the whole issue was "market or no market," and would be a resolution adopted by civic clubs, opposing the expenditure of $189,000 on the old structure and urging a complete new market house.

Real Development Denied

"There isn't a councilman here that would dare go before the public opposed to a market," White said. "What the federation wants is to see a market plan developed over a period of years. We believe that expenditure on the old building would be only a waste of money, as it would all have to be torn out when a new market was built."

Walter Wise, council president, said the city could not afford to enter into any million-dollar market project at this time, and asked if an improved market house wasn't better than none at all.

No Expense, Says White

"I can't understand why every one says the city can't afford it," White retorted. "It won't cost the city anything. A new market will pay for itself in twenty years."

"The real problem at the market house is management," said Wise. "A new building will not remedy it."

White admitted that management was vital, but doubted "if city officials had the courage to take their hands off the money and establish a real management."

"The city council," he said, "has full authority to fix conditions under which the market shall operate."

It was stated that the majority of the stall owners did not want any improvement at the market and preferred to be let alone. This brought a report that that was the whole story at the market house—that it was created for the standowners and not for the public.
