Well Known Hospital Physician Says These Are Some of the Danger Signals of Exhausted Nerve Force—What To Do

One of the most terrible of all human ailments is exhausted nerve force. It weakens all the vital organs of the body and as a result all kinds of alarming symptoms may appear. Some people get nervous indigestion, pains over the eyes, in the heart, and across the small of the back; in others the first symptoms are mental instead of physical—sleeplessness, worry over trifles, or inability to concentrate on your work.

The nervous mother is upset by her children, squabbles with her husband, has frequent fits of the "blues" and bursts into tears over the smallest troubles. In such cases it is worse than useless to waste time taking stimulating medicines or narcotic drugs; the starving nerve cells must have nerve food which is supplied by the blood. Any physician will tell you that if the blood supply were cut off from any nerve in your body that the nerve would die.

With ROOSEVELT IN AFRICA

by W. Robert Foran © 1924 NEA Service Inc.

Robert Foran, newspaper correspondent, accompanies the Theodore Roosevelt expedition into Africa, in 1909, to British East Africa, and then made the long railroad journey to their first camp in the same crowded Kapsi lands.

ROOSEVELT TURNS HIS BACK ON AFRICA.

They all had traveled in from many miles away in order to greet the distinguished American hunter. As he stepped ashore they broke into lusty cheering, and then led Roosevelt and the whole of the party to a grass-thatched banda, where they had spread out a very creditable banquet.

names were historic in East Africa, Uganda, the Congo and Central Africa generally.

Each man carried his life in his hands, for if he was captured it meant ten years in a Belgian chain gang—which was nothing more nor less than being tortured to death while chained to a gang of African convicts.

About 2 o'clock in the morning the expedition resumed the voyage down the Nile to Wadai, where it was to cross over into the Congo for the "Rhino Camp."

CHAPTER XXVII
The Arrival at Nimule

Nimule is very hot, and is considered the most unhealthy government station in the length and breadth of Uganda. Wadai did not claim that record, but it had exacted such a heavy toll that it had been finally abandoned.

The Roosevelt expedition came on the fourth of February. The first to arrive was a rowboat containing some of the porters and a number of the loads, and after a short interval, Quentin Grogan came ashore from the Good Intent with more porters and most of the trophies obtained in the Lado Enclave. All the Europeans now present in Nimule had congregated at the landing stage to greet Colonel Roosevelt on his arrival.

Presently, round a bend in the wide river, appeared the steam launch flying the big American flag at the bow. It was towing the two sailing boats, which were full of porters and baggage. Colonel Roosevelt and Kermit had traveled in the launch, and so had Cunningham; while the three naturalists were in a sailing boat.

Every one looked most wonderfully well, especially the two Roosevelts. Mearns and Heller had both grown hard, fine beards, and looked as hard as lions. Kermit's beard was making good progress and he had now adopted the East African custom of wearing short khaki trousers, leaving the knees bare.

that, after leaving Koba, they had traveled all night and the next day before they reached "Rhino Camp." He said that Colonel Roosevelt and every one was very well, and that they were all hugely pleased with their success with the white rhino, and that Kermit was out with Grogan at the moment of writing in the hope of killing a good bull to complete the group.
