

EVEN MONEY PUT UP IN GOVERNOR RACE IN COUNTY

Jackson Backers Quick to Cover Bets McCulloch
Will Carry Marion.

Wagers that Dr. Carleton B. McCulloch will carry Marion County over Ed Jackson in the gubernatorial race were fully covered by Jackson money in local betting circles today. Money is all placed even on the county race.

Democrats are asking odds that McCulloch will be elected, one bet of $400 to $1,000 going begging, but bets of $200 to $400 being taken. Other wagers still open on one hand are $100 to $200, $50 to $100, $20 to $50 and $10 to $25 on McCulloch being elected.

Bets of $150-$100 that Jackson carries Marion County have not been covered yet. Other bets are $75 to $50 on Jackson carrying the State. President Coolidge still remains a heavy favorite to carry Indiana, one bet of $50 to $75 he will have a majority of 100,000 being posted. A bet of $50 to $150 that Davis will be elected has been covered.

In county circles, a wager of $100 at even money that Omer Hawkins, Republican, will beat Otto Ray, Democrat, in the race for sheriff, has been covered. A second bet asks odds, $50 to $75 that Hawkins will be elected.

A $50 bet that William E. Clauer, Democrat, is elected treasurer over Edward Ramsey is not taken. A $20 bet that Ralph Updike is elected Congressman has been covered, but $100 the same way is still open.

A wager of $150 to $50 that Davis is not elected President is open on another hand.

The square crown is replacing the rounder one in hats, and height is being implied by trimming as well as by actual inches.

"Why do you say that, Karl?" asked Alice angrily. There is no reason why you should not have been at least co-executor with John."

"There is no reason, Alice, why I should be made co-executor. You know very well you are very anxious to go abroad to live, and it would have complicated things greatly not to have given John full rein. Alice will be sure of this when she has had time to think," said Karl, turning to mother. "She knows as well as the rest of you that I have never in my whole life had anything to do but to spend my income."

"Which, Karl, you have done with great kindness and profit to all those about you," I interrupted softly.

For some reason, little Marquise, this seemed to enrage Alice beyond power of control.

"You, Leslie, should be able to bear this testimony, for you yourself have profited by Karl's kindness, as you call it, to an uncommon degree."

Every one but myself seemed horrified at this. Even mother started up in bed with a look of such pain on her face as she did not have when my father died.

Honestly, little Marquise, I thought John was going to strike Alice. He went toward her with doubled fists. I hastily got between them. Both Karl and mother made an exclamation of reproach.

"Alice, what is the matter with you?" said mother. "Don't you remember what you have come for? Your father lies dead in the other room, and here you are letting your animosity and hate for your sister carry you beyond all bounds. It seems to me that some one else, some spirit of evil, has gotten into your body. I cannot otherwise understand why you should say these things to your sister at all, let alone at such a time as this."

"Does the cold form of your father lying alone in the other room mean nothing to you? Have you schooled yourself only to hate, never to love? I shall find it in my heart almost to pity Karl. How can you quarrel with Leslie, who never has shown anything but kindness and love for you?"

"I cannot stay here to listen to this unseemly wrangling, which only means disrespect and utter indifference to your father's memory."

Mother raised herself to a sitting posture. Sarah, her maid, unostentatiously brought her dressing gown and put it over her shoulders. Both Karl and John turned to their feet as she swung herself out of bed and Sarah put on her bedroom slippers. Then, between her sons-in-law, she made a most dignified exit.

John told me afterward, little Marquise, that Karl apologized brokenly both to mother and him for Alice's conduct.

Oh, little Marquise, you can understand how unhappy this has made me. I thought all the trouble over those pearls was buried, and you see that Alice dug it up at the first opportunity.

Impulsively I determined to settle things once and for all. (Copyright, 1934, NEA Service, Inc.) NEXT: This letter continued.

"Ain't you glad you live in a country that can have Coolidge for a President? Ain't you glad you live in a State that can have Ed Jackson for a Governor? Ain't you glad you live in a State that can elect a man like Clyde Walb for a party chairman?"

Clyde Carlin of Angola, Ind., member of the Republican State speakers bureau, asked these questions of the Seventh District Woman's Republican Club at its luncheon Thursday at the Columbia Club.

"The time is past when women are silent partners in this voting business," he said.

Martha Lee Says

Man Prefers Comfort to Authority in Home

Rule No. 1 for keeping a husband: Give him a real home. It was pounded by a young man married just long enough to appreciate the meaning of a home, after months in boarding houses and bachelor apartments.

"Trouble with some women," he went on, "is they have museums, instead of homes. A man doesn't care much about how elaborate or expensive his abode is, or whether it consists of two rooms or twenty, if it is comfortable and pleasing to look at."

"He'd rather see a flower pot in the window than expensive hangings that shut out the light. He'd rather have a worn chair, if it's comfortable, than the most valuable antique in town, if he has to keep away from it because it might be broken."

"He wants to be able to smoke in his home, without having his wife warn him not to get ashes on her rug. He wants to enjoy a meal without being scolded for spilling things on the linen."

"Most men don't care so much about being 'master' in their homes as they do about being comfortable. Give a man a real home and the rest'll take care of itself."

And that's that.

Those Ashes!

Dear Miss Lee: I have been married nine years, and have a home at last, after living with relatives the rest of my life. I've worked and saved to get this home, and it is just what I wanted.

But my husband doesn't seem to care as much about it as I do. He gets ashes all over my new carpets, and he throws his coat and hat down anywhere, which doesn't make things look very nice. He isn't a bit careful about not scratching the furniture, which we skimped a lot to get, and he fusses at me if I say anything to the children about being careful.

Miss Lee, I love my husband, but I love my home, too, and I want to keep it nice. People tell me I am a wonderful housekeeper, but my husband doesn't seem to care about that, although he is good to me about everything else.

WOMEN'S WIFE
Which do you prefer to be, a wonderful housekeeper or a wonderful husband-keeper? I think the latter is preferable. Your husband knows that beautiful, unscratched furniture and spotless rugs do not make a home. He knows that children who cannot have good times at home for fear of spoiling something are the ones who go elsewhere for their fun.

Inspire in your husband and children a love of their home, and a feeling that it is to be lived in, not just admired. Then pride in it will follow, and happiness will crowd any regrets for worn chairs out of your heart.

WONDERING WHY: This "other woman" is a wife, perhaps a mother. Put your case up to her, and ask her to put herself in your place. It will be hard to appeal to her, but do it for your babies' sakes. Don't nag your husband, or even accuse him, but do everything you can to make home pleasant for him.
