Investigation at Standstill
Until Scientists Finish Examination.

By United Press.
COLUMBUS, Ohio, Nov. 26.—John R. King, county prosecutor in charge of investigation of death of Mrs. Addie Sheatsley, today predicted he will be able to accomplish nothing further toward solution of the furnace mystery until scientists examine Mrs. Sheatsley's organs and blood stains found at the parsonage have completed their tests and drawn their conclusions.

The prosecutor issued a formal statement declaring that until the scientists report, the investigation is virtually at a standstill and no further question Rev. C. V. Sheatsley, husband of the woman whose charred body was found in the furnace.

Pastor Due Back
The pastor and his four children were due back in Columbus today from Paris, Ohio, where they had been buried Mrs. Sheatsley's remains.

Prosecutor King and his assistants have been checking up on the stories told by the pastor and his children, and are endeavoring to straighten out several discrepancies. The points the prosecutor desires to clear up are why the furnace fire was not extinguished as soon as Mrs. Sheatsley's body was recognized, why the mysteriously missing bottle of carbolic acid reappeared in the parsonage a week after the family had left town, and why no mention was ever made by the pastor or any of his children of the visit of Mrs. Gladys Redelfs of Lithopolis to the parsonage on the day of Mrs. Sheatsley's death.

Rabbit Blood?
Rev. Sheatsley insists the stains found at the parsonage are rabbit blood. But the pastor also maintains that his wife committed suicide.

HAWKINS CASE
SENTENCES DEC. 19

decided that a conspiracy existed. It then voted the guilt of the defendants. The facts of Haight and Willis were the last to be decided, and this was not done until the jury had asked for a reading of the court's instructions regarding them.

Before court opened Wednesday morning there were hundreds of rumors in circulation regarding Morton S. Hawkins, head of the Hawkins interest, a defendant in the case who defaulted his bond of $7,500 and is a fugitive from justice.

Little Drama Fails
The story most generally heard was that Hawkins was to make a dramatic last minute entrance into court, enter a plea of guilty and assume the blame for the entire conspiracy. However, when court adjourned his whereabouts remained as great a mystery as on the day the trial opened fifteen days ago.

The case went to the jury at 2:25 Tuesday evening. At 11:15 they returned to the court room for further instructions regarding Haight and Willis. Part of Judge Geiger's instructions relating to the two defendants was read. Sixteen minutes later the jury returned and William H. Swindell, Elmore, Ind., foreman, announced a verdict was ready.

Penalties applicable in the case were: For using the mails to defraud, a prison sentence of not more than five years; for conspiracy to use the mails to defraud, imprisonment of not over two years or a fine of not over $10,000, or both.

Gigantic Swindle Charged
The indictments returned March 10, 1924, on which the fourteen were found guilty, charges them with aiding Morton S. Hawkins, president of the Hawkins Mortenson Company, whose home office was at Portland, Ind., in establishing and manipulating a gigantic system of mortgage and loan companies operating over about thirty States, involving more than 6,000 persons and defrauding thousands of "victims" out of millions of dollars.

ANDERSON WITH VETO CAN FROST BALTZELL HOPES

Pointed Out Here Princeton
Judge May Not Get U. S.
Bench Plum.

While Washington dispatches say United States Senator James E. Watson has asked President Coolidge to name Judge Robert Baltzell, Princeton, Ind., as successor of Federal Judge A. B. Anderson, whose promotion to the Circuit Court of Appeals at Chicago is looked for at any time, rumors going about the Federal Bldg. here say Baltzell may not get the Federal plum.

According to a statement today from a high Republican official, however, the Baltzell appointment will go through, despite opposition in Marion County.

Judge Anderson can veto any appointment that does not meet with his approval. It is pointed out by refusing to resign. It is said Anderson is very friendly toward Homer Elbert, a Harry New appointee, and mentioned as a likely successor to Anderson's job.

According to the Washington dispatches, Harry Long, Muncie, who is the Watson candidate for successor to Elliott as United States district attorney, has let it be known he doesn't want the job. Long is serving on the United States shipping board in Washington, with greater financial remuneration than the district attorneyship would bring, it is said.

Watson has admitted defeat in his attempt to oust Bert C. Morgan, Federal prohibition agent for Indiana, and announced Morgan would serve until his time expires next June. Morgan is a Harry New appointee. Frank Rowley, postmaster at Angola, was mentioned as Morgan's successor.

Richardson had been in good health, it is said, his last illness being about a year ago.

Richardson was appointed to the department April 14, 1921, and has had a good record, according to Chief John O'Brien.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Charles Richardson, two sons, Arthur, 1, and Charles, 3, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Richardson, 1603 Bates St. Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

THREAT TO ASK REPEAL OF CITY ZONE LAW MADE

Plan Commission Split
Over Petition for Grocery.

A threat to have the city zoning law repealed by city council was made by Lloyd D. Claycombe, council representative on the city planning commission. In a session late Tuesday, after a bitter argument on whether to permit business interests at the southwest corner of Thirtieth and Delaware Sts., Claycombe stoutly opposed a petition of E. H. Bingham to establish a grocery at that corner, but his motion to deny the petition deadlocked the board of zoning appeals with four opposing and four favorable votes. The case was continued a week.

"Then I might as well go to the council and ask repeal of the ordinance," Claycombe said. "If we let the bars down every time there is a petition, we are not serving any good purpose."

"Is that a threat or a promise?" retorted Gustav Schmidt, former city councilman, and member of the board.

The vote showed Claycombe, John Atherton, Foster Clippinger and Frank C. Linnefelter voting against, and Thomas C. Howe, Thomas Dillon, Coffin and Schmidt, for the petition.

Property owners living nearby protested the petition threatening to sell their property if business interests should be started.

Frequent opposition to the zoning law has been expressed by councilmen, but there never was believed to be sufficient sentiment to call for repeal.

The board of appeals approved petition of the Indiana Provision Company to start a refrigeration plant at Gardner's Lane and White River, Hisey & Titus, funeral directors at 951 N. Delaware St., were given permission to remodel their establishment.

FORCED TO QUIT

Division on Social Policies
Causes Split.

Paul L. Benjamin, general secretary of the Family Welfare Society, was ousted as the result of differences with and in the board of directors over policies, it was learned today.

The resignation of Benjamin, to take effect Dec. 31, and that of Miss Rose Porter, case supervisor, effective Monday, were accepted by the executive committee of the board Tuesday at the Lincoln.

Benjamin, according to reliable information, refused to resign last week, when requested to do so, because no specific charges had been made. In his letter of resignation, received by W. H. Insley, president of the board, Tuesday, Benjamin said he was resigning because of "a division of the board over some plans which I feel are vital."

Benjamin was granted a month's leave of absence and Miss Harriet Shepard, a district supervisor, was named to act as secretary until a successor to Benjamin is chosen.

Miss Porter, whose resignation is effective Monday, will become secretary of mothers' allowance of the State aid to widows in Allegheny County, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Economical Service

In the last fiscal year the Active Members of the S. A. T. U. who use Indiana Bell service paid $394,136.15, or an average of $2.22 each for the products of the American Telephone & Telegraph Company which were purchased for them by the Indiana Bell Company.

This sum was equal to four and one-half per cent of the total amount collected from telephone users by the Indiana Bell Company during the year. It was paid by the Indiana Bell to the A. T. & T. Co. for the following service:

1. The use and maintenance of all the telephone transmitters, receivers and induction coils on the Indiana Bell System.

2. The availability of capital in such sums and at such times as was necessary to development and maintenance of uninterrupted service.

3. The rights of all patents owned or controlled by the A. T. & T. Co. and the right to use all standardized new methods and apparatus developed through experimental work by the A. T. & T. Co.

4. The benefits of advice and assistance from the largest and most expert staff of trained men in the engineering, operating and administrative branches of telephony.

5. Protection against any liability that might arise through the use of patented apparatus, methods or systems.

6. The right to extend this service to connecting lines and the benefit of the experience of all other companies associated with the A. T. & T. Co. in meeting the difficulties of the business.

Did the telephone patron pay too much for this service?

Telephone experts have repeatedly shown that no one telephone company could furnish the same service provided by the A. T. & T. Co. for less.

Experts estimate that the Indiana Bell could not, itself, provide this service for its limited number of patrons for $10 apiece, annually.

But, when the costs are divided among all the telephone users of the Nation, it is obvious that they are less than when borne by the patrons of one company alone.

Next we will discuss the basis of telephone rates.
