

UTILITIES HAVE BRIGHT FUTURE

New Power Plants Will Be Built.

A prosperous year is forecast for Indiana public utilities by Charles L. Henry, president of the Indiana Public Utility Association.

"There has been an increasing trend in recent years toward consolidation and merging of interests in the public utility field, all tending toward increased efficiency within the industry and better service to the public," Henry said. "This has been a matter not only of consolidation of executive and operating forces, but physical consolidation and interconnection of properties."

Individual companies operating over broad territories have recognized the value of interconnection between power sources and transmission lines. This policy of in-

Booze Good?

EUTHER Prohibition Director Bert Morgan was right when he said Indianapolis had a "dry" New Year's eve, or the liquor was all good, according to a check-up today.

Only one New Year's eve alcohol casualty was reported at the hospitals. This was at the city hospital, where a 30-year-old man was listed as suffering from post alcoholism. He was admitted Wednesday night.

Two other men were discharged Thursday, after being admitted Tuesday. One was an acute alcoholism case, and the other case was diagnosed as either alcoholism or epilepsy.

terconnection will be followed to a greater extent even than in the past. Many new water power and steam power plants have been planned for construction in 1925, and many miles of high tension transmission and interconnection lines will be built. With the electric industry of the Nation definitely committed to a policy of interconnection, there remains much work to be done to make the exchange of power between companies practicable and efficient.

"Helped Me Gain Strength"

Mrs. L. P. Lambert, for several years a popular school-teacher at Morse, Louisiana, tells the following story of how she used to be afflicted, and how she recovered better health:

"I would ache all over. My feet, my toes, my arms, hands, head—my whole body seemed to be in one awful pain. I would grow so nervous that I could not hold a cup in my hand. My husband would have to hold my coffee for me to drink. Last fall I was in such a bad condition that I had to spend about three days in bed every month. It seemed to me that I was on my last go-round."

Then one day, said Mrs. Lambert, she happened to read about Cardui and the experiences of some women who had been helped by it.

"I felt that Cardui might help me if I tried it," she continued, "for I had been suffering with similar trouble to that mentioned there. I had heard of Cardui all my life and I knew many women who said they had been helped by it. The very next day I began to take it."

"Very soon after, I began to notice my improvement. I kept on till I felt like a different woman. I gained in weight from 98 pounds to 115 and felt better than I had in years. I took six bottles right along and found it a splendid tonic. My suffering was partly due to a run-down condition and the Cardui stimulated my appetite and helped me to gain the strength I needed. . . . I take a bottle every now and then, even now, just as a tonic to keep up my strength, but I am in better health than I have been in for years."

All druggists sell Cardui. Try it.

Sox Betray Rah Rahs and Youth Character and Purse, Says Clerk

MISS MARGA RETZ RYAN

A man is judged by the socks he wears.

So says Miss Margaret Ryan, clerk at L. S. Ayres & Co., who believes men may be classified by their hose.

"Men decide their own fate when they calmly walk up to a counter to purchase hose. Folks size them up and judge accordingly."

If a college football star starts a fad on the entire campus falls in line. At present a red stripe hose is all the rage at Butler. Collegians favor the fancy weaves and like odd color combinations. Loud wool plaids are popular.

While young men are up-to-the-minute and buy the latest style, elderly men choose plain grey or black hose.

Working men buy a cheaper hose—usually brown or black.

"Want see some socks," is the usual greeting of most customers, according to Miss Ryan. Those who have money decide that they want immediately, but the poor fellow usually looks "them all over."

"Women, who purchase for men, buy the better quality. Men are often accompanied by women."

This measure was approved at a recent meeting of the Irvington Republican Club.
