

PASTORS TO MAKE PLEA FOR FAMILY CHURCH GOING

Parents Urged to Bring Their Children With Them on Sunday.

PASTORS of the city start out the New Year on the first Sunday urging parents not only to attend church services but to see that the entire family is represented.

A greater church attendance is being urged by all ministers of the city. Many churches are planning revivals and a week of prayer this month.

In behalf of this campaign in interest of larger church attendance, the current edition of the Indianapolis Unitarian Bulletin answers the question: "Why Join a Church?"

The answer is printed as follows in the bulletin:

1. The church performs three sacramental offices—Christening, Marriage, Burial. Many prefer, as a matter of self-respect, that these offices be performed by an organization toward which they have a personal rather than a perfunctory relationship.

2. Joining a church gives one a sense of proprietorship. I attended the Unitarian Church in Pittsburgh for two years before I made my decision. After that I felt it was my church—I was no longer a mere visitor.

3. Untying with a church carries with it not only a sense of one's right, but a wholesome sentiment of obligation. For a person to visit divers churches in order to find one to his liking is quite proper. But "church flouters," those who go from one church to another for years and never unite with any are spiritual parasites; for if all people were "flouters" churches would disappear.

4. It is a gallant thing to make a public avowal of your convictions. To "stand up and be counted" on the side of a cause in which you believe is to choose courage rather than timidity. "God never makes himself manifest through cowards."

5. Each year brings its toll of loss through removal or death. Your untiring with the church gives the members and the minister fresh encouragement. Seeing you in the ranks they say inwardly: "The work will go on with augmented effectiveness."

6. Many wish their children to grow up under the influence of the church. When the stormy period of adolescence comes to young people a reasonable and reverent religion is an armor against temptation. The surest way to interest your children in the church is to be devoted to it yourself. Church attendance and membership is the only practical proof you can offer of such devotion.—D. L.

Christ's Triumphal Entry Into Jerusalem

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for Jan. 4: Christ's Triumphal Entry Into Jerusalem. Luke 19:29-40.

By WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D.
Editor of The Congregationalist.

SOON after the procession that Zacchaeus watched from a tree, and that ended so gloriously for him, comes this greater procession that has become known as "the Triumphal Entry," which was to end in tragedy for our Lord.

Jesus had returned from Jericho to Jerusalem. Or at least when this lesson opens He was on His way thither.

He had come near to Bethany, where He had restored Lazarus to life, a place that He loved and where He was himself deeply beloved.

It was only natural that the masses of the people should throng around Him and hail Him with joy. And now a strange thing happens. Jesus who has almost persistently avoided the throng, who formerly has gone off in a boat across the Sea of Galilee to escape the multitude, and who has withdrawn to the mountains or desert in prayer when the people have pressed about Him, deliberately plans to enter Jerusalem in triumph and to accept the homage of the people.

What had brought about this change? We may be sure that it was no change in the heart of Jesus himself. He was still the meek and lowly Jesus. He plans to enter the city upon an ass' colt, and the symbolism of this is explained by reference to the ninth verse of the prophecy of Zechariah. Jesus is not coming in state, but in lowliness and service, and as the bringer of salvation.

He knows that "His hour is come." He knows that the way of seeming triumph will prove a way of sacrifice and suffering.

He has already begun to speak to the disciples of this coming to Jerusalem and of the things that He must suffer there "of the elders and chief priests and scribes" (Matt. 16:21).

The exultation of the people is for Him subdued, not only by the sense of popular fickleness, but also by the consciousness that He is going the way of death and that those who have saved others through giving themselves.

Dr. Edward Haines Kistler will open the new year in the new Fairview Presbyterian Chapel with a message Sunday at 11 on "Go Thou Thy Way." At 7:45 he will speak on "A Busting—or, a Busy—New Year." Thursday at 6:30 will be held the first church night dinner in this chapel, followed by a round-table worship at 7:15, conducted by the minister, on "At Your Corner." At 8 p. m. the Young People's Club will hold its monthly meeting, with a program by the live wires' class.

"THE EVANGELISTIC CHURCH" and "Winning Men for Christ and the Church," are the subjects for Rev. J. H. Rilling's sermons at the revival meeting Sunday morning and evening at the Second Evangelical Church. The brotherhood of the church will have charge of the opening service. Sunday evening, special singing.

But the inherent dignity of the King of Kings, and the tender affection of His followers, turn the lowly entry into a triumphal march.

In "Palm Sunday" the historic scene has been memorialized, and as Easter approaches, before "Good Friday" has commemorated Calvary, the people still throng the churches and coming forth with palm branches symbolize their joy, acclaiming as did these upon that way of old their loyalty to the King "that cometh in the name of the Lord."

How deep and real is that loyalty? These of old spread their garments upon the back of the colt. They scattered their clothes in the way, that He might even ride over covered ground. It was a far earlier and a more notable, chivalry than that that led Sir Walter Raleigh to spread his cloak in the muddy path for Queen Elizabeth. What loving deeds and tender affections Jesus called forth by the beauty of His own love and thoughtfulness!

But outward homage is not always the evidence of inward devotion.

OGDEN PROPOSES ASSEMBLY BILLS

C. of C. Committee Approves Fund Measure.

Proposed legislation providing that interest arising from city funds raised by assessment for improvements be turned into the general fund of the city has been approved by Chamber of Commerce legal affairs committee.

Other bills proposed by James M. Ogden, city corporation counsel, and acted on favorably by the committee were: That railroads pay full cost of their own bridges in flood prevention work; requiring approval of city plan commission before plat of subdivisions can be recorded; that all cities be authorized to print an annual report of finances and activities, and providing that State board of accounts have an inspector to supervise public work on petition of ten persons.

Russell T. McFall opposed the latter measure on the ground that additional supervision was unnecessary. Committee will refer bills to directors for final approval.
