She Ate Seemed to Disagree
With Her Till Black-Draught Brought Relief.

Mrs. S. S. McCoy, of Glen Rose, Texas, says: "Something like three years ago I read about Black-Draught and I was in need of medicine for indigestion. Everything I ate seemed to disagree with me, and I would nearly cramp to death.

"I had been suffering with this trouble for quite a while and the many things I tried seemed to give me no relief.

"Then I began taking Black-Draught—a dose after every meal—and it gave me wonderful relief.

...

"For three years we have not been without it in this house. It is the finest medicine for constipation and sour stomach.

"When my husband gets to feeling bad as a result of constipation and impurities in the system, he takes a dose of Theodor's Black-Draught."

...

Next time you feel distress after meals, try taking a pinch of Black-Draught, dry on the tongue, washed down with a swallow of water. The relief of others should encourage you to respect relief by taking Black-Draught.

In this easy, convenient way men and women have written what they take a package of Black-Draught along with them traveling, to have it handy for use at the first sign of indigestion.

LETTER FROM LESLIE PRECOTT TO BEATRICE SUMMERS, CONTINUED

In answer to mother's questioning look, I hastened to explain that to find understanding and consideration between the sexes and to be able to bring others to the place where they might also discover these two great outstanding signposts to happiness, was a much greater achievement than to discover the north pole on earth or a new star in the heavens.

We had quite a conversation on this subject, my dear, but I have written you enough for you to appreciate my mother and for you to understand how much your letter meant to me.

It is wonderful here at Atlantic City this time of year. The air is brisk enough to be bracing, and yet one does not feel the cold as one does in the city. I am probably going to stay here until my baby is born. Ruth Burke came down with me after Alice's funeral and she has promised that when she leaves and goes back to Albany that she will pack up the furniture in my apartment and ship it over to Pittsburgh for me. Isn't that lovely of her?

I would be very ungrateful if I did not thank Fate every day for my good friends like you and Ruth.

...

I shall not try to move into the old home until the alterations are made.

At first mother and I thought we would go out to California but we concluded that it would not be the best thing to do. I felt it would be too far away for Jack, and I knew that until he had gotten dad's business well in hand that it would be impossible for him to think of leaving Pittsburgh for more than a day or two at a time.

I wish you could tell Paula Perier for me that it is very sweet indeed of her to think of my coming baby and I will accept with pleasure any memento of my visit with her when she was in Albany that she may send me. Tell her that contrary to every one else I am hoping that my baby will be a boy, if only to confuse those people who are always afraid that I will grow to hate little Jack when my own son makes his appearance. Nothing nor no one but himself can take one jot of my love for little Jack away from him.

My friends do not seem to understand that the baby that will soon be born will be in a way thrust upon me. While of my own free will I made a place in my arms and in my heart for my oldest child.

In some unaccountable way little Jack seems to sense this, for his love and admiration is apparently boundless. If he is not the child of my body he is something infinitely

Roast Beef Salad

One and one-half cups cooked carrots, 1/2 cup cooked turnips, 1/2 cup string beans, 1/2 cup peas, 12 slices boiled or pickled beets, 1 cup diced cold roast beef, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1/4 teaspoon pepper, 1/2 teaspoon mustard, 1/4 teaspoon powdered sugar, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, 6 tablespoons oil.

The carrots and turnips should be cut in neat small cubes, and the beets in matchlike strips. Combine beets, carrots, turnips and roast beef. Mix salt, mustard, sugar and pepper. Add lemon juice and oil and beat well. Pour this dressing over the salad mixture and let stand in a cold place for one hour. If lettuce is at hand, arrange salad on a bed of shredded leaf lettuce or crisp leaves of head, sprinkle with cooked peas, and garnish with slices of beets. This is an excellent salad for the country housewife to keep in mind because it is not ruined by the lack of lettuce as most salads are.

Martha Lee Says

Guests' Ease Comes First to Good Hostess

To be a good hostess means more than to have meals well-served and to see that your guests are comfortable physically. I have seen homes in which guests were given every sort of luxury, in which every detail of household management went smoothly, but in which, despite these advantages, guests seldom enjoyed themselves.

The reason was easy to see. The hostesses put themselves out to see that their guests had every physical comfort, but they did little to add to their mental and spiritual ease.

Now, I do not propose that a hostess should become a spiritual advisor for her guests. Neither do I suggest that she conduct classes in literature. Such drastic methods are not needed.

The simplest and best way for her to fulfill this important part of her duties as hostess is to put her guests' pleasure above everything else. It is unpardonable for a hostess to indulge in a family argument before her guests. Yet it is done. No woman who does that can qualify as a good hostess.

Hostess Duties

Dear Miss Lee: I am going to have two girls as visitors the last of this month. Will you please tell me the most important thing I should do as hostess? FLORABELLE

The most important thing for you to do is to give your guests a sincere welcome, and to maintain a truly hospitable atmosphere throughout their visit. This means to be sure they are not subjected to the embarrassment of any family or social arguments, and not to tire yourself so much getting ready for your guests that you cannot enjoy their visit.

See that their rooms are pretty and in good order. It is a nice note to have flowers in the room, and a carafe filled with cold water every night. Have a plentiful supply of towels and clothes hangers.

When your guests arrive give them an opportunity to rest a bit before any parties, if possible. Tell them what time meals are served and what the social progress is.

The hostess usually entertains within a day or two after her guests' arrival at either an afternoon or evening party, or both.

Give your guests some time to themselves. You probably will be busy with personal affairs in the morning, and they can rest, shop or do whatever appeals to them. An over-attentive hostess is about as bad as one who neglects her guests.
