ATTENTION GIVEN TO SICK ANIMALS
Expert Veterinarians Answer Calls Night and Day.

The little thoroughbred puppy or Persian kitten that has grown to be such a part of the household seems to have a strange hold on the hearts of the family and when he gets sick it's a pretty long time for every one. Lovers of "pet stock" greet with relief the acquaintance of expert veterinarians.
Drs. E. T. and L. E. Davis, father and son, have a thirty-year-old business that makes them welcome at times when the little "fellers" lives seem doubtful. Any time in the day or night they will answer calls and advise or attend suffering animal. They are specialists in dog and cat diseases and specialize in skin diseases.
Both are instructors in the Indiana Veterinary College. Their treatments are the very most up-to-date known to science and are without cruel or inhuman treatment to the animals. They operate a special ambulance service, make delicate surgical operations and will board the animals in sanitary modern kennels.

DRY CLEANING IS DONE DEPENDABLY

Hollander Company Grown Steadily Since 1916.

Started in 1916 with one employee, D. Hollander and E. Hollander, proprietors of the Hollander Garment Cleaners, 1026 Virginia Ave., may well look back with pride at the gradual but steady growth of their establishment. Seven employees today do the expert work of the company.

Their policy has been never to disappoint a customer and their strict adherence to that policy has given them a standing to be envied throughout the community.

Besides a general line of the highest grade cleaning and dyeing, they operate their own pressing equipment. This feature alone has made them many friends. For dressmakers either professional or amateur, the pressing of a garment is a serious bit of work and a dependable concern to do that work is, indeed, an asset.
"Moreover," said Hollander, dry cleaning protects the health of the Nation. We feel that we are an essential in any community and that our mission is not only to build up

UNIQUE BUSINESS GROWS STEADILY

L. M. Gross Originated Sanitary Washed Wiper Co.
A unique business, but obviously essential to certain types of concerns is the Sanitary Washed Wiper Company, 807-809 S. Delaware St.
This company takes old soiled cloths that have apparently served their purpose and washes them in up-to-date, chemically sanitary machines and sells them to automobile companies and machine factories that use a startling number of these "wipers" daily.
The equipment of this concern is thoroughly efficient, including three washing machines, three extractors which effectively remove all grease and dirt, and three drying machines, all of sterling make.
L. M. Gross, sole proprietor of the company, established it in 1913 on S. Meridian St., and as their production increased the floor space was increased. At present they have three floors occupying 20,000 feet of space, five employees and have the distinction of being the originators of the Sanitary Washed Wiper business in Indianapolis.

BLUE SKY BILL STUDIED

Commercial Secretaries to Discuss Legislature Matters.
A "blue sky" bill with "teeth" will be among legislative matters discussed by Indiana Commercial Secretaries Association Friday at 601-year meeting at Indianapolis Chamber of Commerce, H. E. Bodine, president, said.
W. H. Arnett, Kokomo, is chairman of the legislative committee. Several other bills will be studied.
John B. Reynolds, secretary, Indianapolis Chamber of Commerce, the host, W. H. Howard, secretary, Board of Trade, and George H. Mosser, manager, State Chamber of Commerce, are in charge of arrangements.

GARMENT CONCERN OLDEST IN CITY

H. L. Sanders Co. Strives for Superiority.

The manufacture of dentists, jackets, surgeons robes, nurses costumes, waiters and cooks and maid's outfits, barbers' and butchers' coats, and various other types of uniforms for use in factories, automobile drivers costumes, etc., has been well done by an Indianapolis firm for thirty-five years.
H. L. Sanders Company, 218 Indiana Ave., is one of the oldest manufacturing companies of this type in the State and has steadily grown by virtue of the dependability of its organization and the quality of its products.
Superiority of workmanship and high grade materials have long been the pride of this concern. Each employee is a specialist in his line and very garment turned out of the house is stamped with the mark of approval before it leaves the hands of the firm. Up-to-date machinery is used in every department and a constant effort is being made to give entire satisfaction to the ever increasing number of customers.

STUDIES TASTES OF CUSTOMERS

English Cafeteria Manager Has Success.

A. H. Faris, proprietor of the English Hotel Cafeteria, states that his business, in spite of the so-called general depression, is growing steadily.
The cry in the "eating game" is that there is no business. But people must eat and where is decided by the adroit restaurant manager who can foresee the tastes of his customers from close study.
"I ask myself," said Faris, "when

RACE DRIVER HAS BATTERY CONCERN

L. L. Corum, 1924 Winner, In Business.

What do they do between seasons, these race drivers who claim our admiration and envy during the summer months when the Speed King reigns? Well, here's one at 901 N. Illinois St., running a successful little shop where he builds batteries for automobiles and radio sets.
L. L. Corum of the Indianapolis Battery Company, was the winner of the race in 1924 and he is planning to drive again in the 1925 race. In 1923 he got fifth in a Fronty Ford.
His shop was started in July and steadily has increased because of confidence inspired by his mechanical knowledge.
