

Martha Lee's Column

'Fifty-Fifty'

Dear Martha Lee: Marriage is what people make it. Too many people marry before they are in love or ready to settle down.

When people marry it is time to live married life. This does not mean to grow old. You must be able to be as young as you are. It does not pay to be jealous or to be bossy. Go after it on all subjects.

Martha and I have been married six years and have two little children. I like married life much better than single life. I have a very good and happy husband.

A HAPPY WIFE.

Mrs. Martha Lee: To me, the institution of marriage is a most holy one, one that should be analyzed from every viewpoint before the step is taken. That something is wrong is very evident, proved by the numerous divorce cases, but it does not lie within the institution itself. Before a man or woman either enters upon any important business proposition the one thing considered first of all is: "Is this step going to result in? Not so with marriage. Too many times it is a blind step and terminates in the courts. No such thought is given when our future happiness and contentment are involved. In a way this is a very, very important business proposition to be figured out in dollars and cents, but in happiness. Adopting the business method which either principal invests and interest that which is returned, if two partners in business invest but little capital their profits are going to be likewise small. So it is with marriage—before it will ever be a success both partners concerned must be willing to invest their all and until they do the profit will be very small. We never get out of a thing any more than that which we put into it.

The Tangle

LETTER FROM ZOE ELLINGTON TO ELIZABETH SWARTZ, GENEVA, SWITZERLAND. CONTINUED.

I have never seen money spent so lavishly, my dear Elizabeth; in fact I did not know there was so much money in all the world, and yet there is always the sad eyes of Mrs. Prescott before me.

It is true that money can make one materially comfortable, but beyond comfort, luxury means nothing except a softening of both the physical and moral fibers.

I think that tomorrow Mrs. Prescott would be glad to begin her life in a small house, as her mother did with her husband, taking the full care of it herself and raising her children.

She seems to almost hate the luxury with which she is surrounded and the other night I heard her say she really wished that she was like a friend of hers, a Mrs. Atherton, a woman who had to work for her living.

Someone said: "But Mrs. Atherton has no one to love her, no one to understand and sympathize with her."

Mrs. Prescott did not answer, but into her eyes there came a more desolate look, if possible, than usual.

Although "Sister Ruth" has said very little to me about my brother, yet I have gathered that she was very unhappy with him, and it has thrown a gloom over her entire life.

Mr. Burke, the man she married, adores her, but always there seems to be lurking in Ruth's heart a feeling that she might have made my brother happier.

I have tried to make her understand that although my brother was very good to me I knew that he was very selfish, that he never gave even me any part of himself, although he sent me a great deal of money (which I am sure now he did not take from his own pleasures or pursuits). It is easy to sign checks on a commercial bank but to draw from one's bank of good nature and patience and sympathy and love is another matter and one must always be able to do this if one would make those about them happy.

I have told you a great deal about these people with whom I am with because I think perhaps they are a typical American family. As such their lives must be as interesting to you as to me.

I will write you, my dear, from time to time and tell you how these people live out their lives. I certainly do hope that some time I shall see that sad look gone from Mrs. Prescott's eyes. Perhaps it will be soon, for she expects her baby within the next month.

Everybody is hoping it will be a girl, but Mrs. Prescott confided to me the other day that she would like another boy.

I don't know just how little Jack—that is what her oldest child is called—will take the entrance of another into his kingdom, for I have never seen such adoring devotion between mother and child as between these two. It is the most beautiful thing in all the family life that I have seen since I have been here. It is the solace and consolation of Mrs. Prescott.

Write me soon, dear. ZOE.

city and State, he said, indications are that building business will be unusually good and prices about stationary.

At any rate, said Rodgers, there will be no decline in prices. The road building program and the prospect of home building keep the cement market firm and the folks who are thinking of building need not wait for prices to decline.

A. B. Keopert Company is filling their warehouses for the spring rush of business. Any kind of high-grade building material such as cement, cement building blocks, wall plaster, interior and exterior stucco, is sold by that company and their delivery equipment assures their customers prompt and accurate delivery.

Both retail and wholesale business in the city and State is given the utmost consideration by this organization. Rodgers asserted that the building of many homes contemplated in the city and State indicate that business generally is bright.

IF HAIR IS TURNING GRAY, USE SAGE TEA

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray or streaked, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundred-fold. Don't bother to prepare the mixture; you can get this famous old recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients at a small cost, all ready for use.

It is called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and lustre of your hair. Everybody uses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy and lustrous.—Advertisement.

WINTER'S AGONIES MAY BE ENDED BY OIL-O-MATIC
Heater Warms Entire House Automatically on Cheap-est Fuel.

After thinking over the winter's agonies with the old furnace and contemplating the possibilities of ever overcoming them, home-owners will receive with welcome the almost incredible facts about the Williams Oil-O-Matic Burner. W. D. Long will gladly demonstrate any of the virtues of this oil burner, which seems to outdo any other in the market.

The automatic thermostat, which operates from the coldest part of the house, keeps the heater at the desired temperature and assures the users of a warm house at all hours of the day.

The feeder is operated by a pressure device and the oil is ignited by electricity. This eliminates any possibility of combustion from oil dripping and the customary complications.

The new Test Garage on the Circle is installing an Oil-O-Matic burner and will use it in the old discarded oil from automobiles. This is undoubtedly the outstanding fact about an Oil-O-Matic. It will burn old oil and cheap oil.

The apparatus will work in any type of furnace and can easily be installed in the old furnace that has not been satisfactory with just as much success as the one installed in the new home.

It is many years before some folks even try to hang on their walls pictures that harmonize with the rest of the interior setting of their homes. That is not all foolishness. The artistic hanging of a picture has more to do with the atmosphere of a room than probably any other one thing. Lyman Brothers, 223 E.
