Lumber Head Praises C. of C. Move to Boost Indianapolis.

Indianapolis will continue to make conservative growth as long as citizens show the spirit of cooperation manifested in the recent Chamber of Commerce movement to boost Indianapolis as an industrial center, O. D. Haskett, president of O. D. Haskett Lumber Company, said today.

"I am proud of Indianapolis and believe it will continue to make a glorious record. I am not at all pessimistic about its future," Haskett said.

"Indianapolis is not slipping. I expect business to be good the remainder of the year."

"There is need for the plan to point out the advantages of Indianapolis in a national publicity drive. The plan submitted by the industries committee of the Chamber has impressed me very much."

Proposal of the industries committee to hire an industrial expert to look after industrial interests, creation of a large sum to be expended in an advertising program, and stimulation of the market for present industries, will be considered by the directors of the Chamber about April 10 on the return of Frank S. Fishback, president.
