

FOREIGN DEBTS DON'T EMBARRASS EUROPE ALONE

U. S. Attitude Toward Russia Contains Nice Boomerang.

By Times Special
WASHINGTON, April 12.—When ever the debt-ridden inhabitants across the ocean become a little weary of hearing American authorities preach on the righteousness of paying one's debts, some of them rise to ask when those Confederate bonds they have been holding for sixty years are going to be paid off. Several times recently the question has been asked in British Parlia ment.

It is answered always by the of ficial reply that these are obligations of the defunct Confederate Government, and therefore no action toward col lection can be taken.

Confederate Debt

The Confederacy contracted a pub lic debt of probably $150,000,000, and States, counties and municipali ties contracted probably as much more. Practically all of this was wiped off by the defeat of the Con federacy and the reconstruction ac'ts of the Federal Government after the Civil War.

Between $10,000,000 and $15,000, 000 of this debt was taken by European friends of the Confederacy, some handled through French bankers and some placed in Great Britain where powerful textile in terests maintained cordial relations with the south developed through their cotton trading. But what European investors lost was only a trifle compared to what southern people lost. The south is just get ting up momentum again after the long dark age brought on by almost universal bankruptcy throughout that great area.

America Can Sympathize

The American Government can sympathize with those foreign hold ers of Confederate paper for it has a drawer full of worthless paper to show for loans made to the ill-fated Kereensky government which was set up after the Czarist regime was overthrown in 1917. That debt, with unpaid interest, now amounts to somewhere between $250,000,000 and $275,000,000. Most of this money was spent in the United States for purchase of munitions and other supplies.

On several occasions senators and members of congress charged that the Kereensky Ambassador here sup ported himself out of the loan for several years after his government ceased to exist.

As one of the conditions of Rus sian recognition this Government in sists that the Soviet government recognize this debt and agree to pay it. Such action would be some what comparable to Great Britain, insisting that the United States re deem the old Confederate bonds held by British subjects.

Wife of Turk in England Easily Di vorced by Husband.

By N.E.A. Service
LONDON, April 12.—Divorced without warning by her Turkish husband, pretty Hadidje Ismet Hanum, 18, within a week became the bride of William Harris.

Her first husband, a secretary in the Turkish embassy in London, di vorced her by saying, "I divorced you." Since this is legal procedure in Turkey and embassy attaches are under Turkish law, a British marriage license clerk held the Turkish secretary had been di vorced legally.

Incompatibility was given by the Turkish husband as cause for di vorce.
