COLLEGE HEAD FLAYS ATTACK ON EVOLUTION

David Starr Jordan Refers to 'Outbreak of Ignorance.'

By David Starr Jordan
Chancellor Emeritus, Leland Stanford University.

Copyright, 1925 by United Press

PALO ALTO, Cal., June 9.—Tennessie's attack upon the theory of evolution is an outbreak of ignorance in opposition to knowledge, worthy of the middle ages. But it was to be expected since the aftermath of war has lifted the lid which once held down the most fantastic credulities.

The movement will do harm to the churches involved, as it will drive away sincere young men, devoted to religion but unwilling to accept the notion that human knowledge was all bound up in ancient traditions or venerable books.

Evolution, in the scientific sense, means orderly change. All nature is changing and all change is orderly. It is not accidental; neither is it whimsical.

It is not necessary to enforce the teaching of evolution. But one cannot go far in any science without accepting it. All modern knowledge and thought is based upon this theory, or, as the obscurantists put it, all are bathed in heresy.

The control of schools belongs to experts, not to the mob. The present movement and attempted discrediting of evolution will fade away. But Christianity, I believe, will survive it through shedding most of its dogmas for the sake of pure religion undeluded.
