

SAVING OF 30 CENTS COSTS MAN LIBERTY

Arrest in Connection With Toledo Mail Robbery Made Here.

Saving about 30 cents cost James English, colored, 342 N. West St., his liberty.

English was arrested Wednesday night by Indianapolis Detectives Barnaby and Warren. Federal postal inspectors on vagrancy charges as a suspect in the $10,000 mail robbery committed last week at Toledo. He is said to have gone to the Louisville postoffice to mail a large package to his sister in Atlanta. When the clerk told him what it would cost, first class, he decided not to send it.

Package Opened

Later he returned and told the clerk to send it second class, but to insure it for $100. He said the package contained stationery. And because written matter cannot be sent in such packages, the clerk opened it and found articles said have been taken in the Toledo robbery.

The Indianapolis address of English, which he had written on the package led directly to his arrest.

Says He's Innocent

English declared he is innocent. He said he had stopped in Toledo a few days on his way to Indianapolis from Detroit, but knew nothing of the mail robbery.

English is held in the Marion County jail and was to be brought before a United States commissioner this afternoon. He probably will be taken to Ohio.

Our Railroads

We are just beginning the second century of railway transportation. The world's first railroad, in England, was opened September 27, 1825, and railway operation in this country began a short time later. It is particularly fitting that the centennial of the railroads should remind us of the important benefits which our country has derived from railway transportation.

Our political unity is one beneficial result of railway transportation. One hundred years ago our country was made up of isolated towns and villages, with transportation limited to rivers which were difficult and dangerous to navigate and to roads which were frequently impassable. Our development as a politically united people, united in speech and in ideals, has followed closely the growth of the railroads, which have linked together the communities that comprise our nation and have provided channels of easy communication among them.

Our economic unity is another beneficial result of railway transportation. No longer is the commerce of a community restricted to commodities produced in its immediate vicinity. Cheap, adequate, widely available transportation has enlarged the areas of distribution and developed the system of specialization that characterizes American industry, agriculture and commerce. Each section of the country is enabled to produce the commodities for which it is best adapted and receive in return for its surplus the products of other regions. As such specialization has taken place, industrial and agricultural efficiency has increased and progress in civilization has been made.

The improved social life of our people is still another result of railway transportation. Standards of living have improved. What were the luxuries of our forefathers are nowadays often regarded as necessities. Travel, instead of an ordeal to be avoided, has become a means of recreation and enjoyment, and the cultural background travel provides is within the reach of all. The rapid conveyance of mail by the railroads facilitates business and social relationships.

The service now provided by the railroads is the best that has ever been known. This efficiency and adequacy of railway service must be maintained and increased if our nation is to continue to prosper and develop.

Ours is a country of great distances, with large areas accessible only by land; so above all other nations the United States is dependent for its present prosperity, indeed for its continued existence, upon railway transportation. Railway transportation is woven into the very fabric of our national life. Recognition of the vital position which it occupies in the lives of our people ought to insure the maintenance of a constructive public attitude toward the railroads.

Constructive criticism and suggestions are invited.

C. H. MARKHAM,

President, Illinois Central System.

CHICAGO, October 1, 1925.

Have You Slowed Down?

Is it increasingly difficult for you to get through the day without taking time out for rest? Are you just a little puzzled as to why you are unable to do as much as you used to do without that "all gone" feeling?

Come in and let us look at your teeth? It is more than probable that there is a condition in your mouth that is causing a toxic poisoning of your system, sapping your strength and making the "going hard" easier.

You need to have no hesitancy in seeking our advice and examination.

Ask the Man Who's Been Here

Paul Badger, Nashville, Ind., Route 2, says: "After suffering several weeks of a badly abscessed tooth, I visited the People's Dentists and had it extracted.

David Butcher, 409 Limehouse Street, Indianapolis, says: "The five teeth found it necessary to extract for me were removed absolutely without pain and was pleased with the service I received at such a reasonable price."
