

CIVIL WAR IN CHINA CERTAIN

(Continued From Page 1)

Feng to come to grips before next summer a comparison of the two men was inevitable. They are as about the as the poles.

China Has Been Tricked

Chang is small. He weighs only ninety pounds. Feng is six feet three in height and weighs 330 pounds. The one is quick with his irony or sarcasm, revealing a mentality of steel behind a pair of scintillating black eyes. The other is friendly, but prone to blunt, undiplomatic speech, unrevealed by even the faintest sense of humor. Talking, he revealed, by word and manner, ideals suggestive of the religious zealot.

The interview had begun with a question regarding the coming conference at Peking, where the United States and other great powers are to discuss with China the age-old question of customs revision and treaty rights.

"Personally," Feng continued, "I have no opinion as to the outcome, but I am not optimistic. China has been out-traded and tricked by the foreign powers too many times. Naturally I am sceptical."

"Without threatening, however, I urge that the conference bear in mind that both the youth of China and the more intelligent of her citizens are now aroused and patriotic, determined to see her free."

Patriotism Flamed

"If the conference fails, other methods will be found to achieve our aims. It required the Martyrdom of the Shanghai students to fire Chinese patriotism, but it flamed today and cannot be quenched by mere conversation or half-measures."

Here what Marshall Chang Hand told me at Mukden regarding Russian communist activities in China came to mind. So I enquired whether Bolshevism had taken hold in Feng's army.

"There is no more Bolshevism about me and no more Bolshevism about my army than there is about America," the "Christian General" replied.

"Bolshevist is a term now applied by all exploiters of persons or nations to any one seeking to advance the interests and welfare of the masses."

Employ Russians

"It is true that I am employing some Russian military experts. But I am also employing Japanese and Italian military experts. If there are more Russians than Japanese or Italians it's because more Russians are available. But I am not employing soviet political methods."

"Instead of crying bolshevism at those who are trying sincerely to direct Chinese patriotism and the efforts of workers, students and intellectuals, foreigners would do better to recognize that the real antidote to the red terror in China is intelligent liberalism. This they should encourage in every way they know how."

Russia was the first country to show a willingness to recognize and aid China's attempts to recover her lost nationalism. I am not interested in the criticisms of nations that are unwilling to do as much."

Appreciates U. S. Aid

"I appreciate America's traditional friendship for China. But just at present I am more interested in noting whether with her relatively small material interests in our country, she will throw her influence on the side of China or become the tool of the British and seek to enhance her interests by unfair threats."

I asked Feng about future evolutionary reforms.

"China's faith in evolutionary reform sponsored by foreigners is dead," he answered. "What China must do is to demand the uncondi-

FOURTEEN AUTO DRIVERS TAKEN

Speeding Charged to Majority Arrested.

Fourteen auto drivers were arrested during the last twenty-four hours, charged with violating speed laws, driving while intoxicated and failing to stop after accidents. Those charged and offenses were:

Gordon Bushnell, 20, of 2715 Indianapolis Ave.; C. H. Wagoner, 42, of 4148 Graceland Ave.; John Creswell, 20, of 23 W. Sixteenth St.; Willard Tucker, 27, of 1602½ E. Nineteenth St.; W. K. Hueckholt, 24, of 2632 Keweenaw Ave.; Joe Kitte, 16, of 910 W. Twenty-Second St.; H. J. Buell, 33, of 2851 N. Capitol Ave.; J. R. Sentyon, 40, of 320 E. Fortieth St.; Clarence Monroe, 34, of 1026 S. Belmont Ave.; Edward Von Bronsickson, 24, of 732 Virginia Ave.; Newton Wasson, 20, of 1836 N. Illinois St., and Robert Gillispie, 18, of Mars Hill, speeding.

John Shea, 21, of 621 N. Tacoma Ave., was held on charges of driving while intoxicated, and Fred Sankers, 33, of 2042 N. New Jersey St., on the same charge and an additional charge of failing to stop after an accident.

tional restoration of her national birthright. When this is assured it will be time enough to talk of the details of readjustment."

While we were talking strains of Christian hymns, sung by Chinese soldiers, floated in from the barracks so I asked Feng to tell me about his army.

"Ninety per cent of my officers are Christians," he said, "and 70 per cent of my army, numbering 120,000, are likewise. They are forbidden the use of tobacco and liquor in any form. The red light district, prostitution, has been banished from the region completely. I employ eight Christian chaplains."

Asked Feng about future evolutionary reforms.

"China's faith in evolutionary reform sponsored by foreigners is dead," he answered. "What China must do is to demand the uncondi-

tionality of her national birthright. When this is assured it will be time enough to talk of the details of readjustment."

While we were talking strains of Christian hymns, sung by Chinese soldiers, floated in from the barracks so I asked Feng to tell me about his army.

"Ninety per cent of my officers are Christians," he said, "and 70 per cent of my army, numbering 120,000, are likewise. They are forbidden the use of tobacco and liquor in any form. The red light district, prostitution, has been banished from the region completely. I employ eight Christian chaplains."

Asked Feng about future evolutionary reforms.

"China's faith in evolutionary reform sponsored by foreigners is dead," he answered. "What China must do is to demand the uncondi-

tionality of her national birthright. When this is assured it will be time enough to talk of the details of readjustment."

While we were talking strains of Christian hymns, sung by Chinese soldiers, floated in from the barracks so I asked Feng to tell me about his army.

"Ninety per cent of my officers are Christians," he said, "and 70 per cent of my army, numbering 120,000, are likewise. They are forbidden the use of tobacco and liquor in any form. The red light district, prostitution, has been banished from the region completely. I employ eight Christian chaplains."

Asked Feng about future evolutionary reforms.

"China's faith in evolutionary reform sponsored by foreigners is dead," he answered. "What China must do is to demand the uncondi-

tionality of her national birthright. When this is assured it will be time enough to talk of the details of readjustment."

While we were talking strains of Christian hymns, sung by Chinese soldiers, floated in from the barracks so I asked Feng to tell me about his army.

"Ninety per cent of my officers are Christians," he said, "and 70 per cent of my army, numbering 120,000, are likewise. They are forbidden the use of tobacco and liquor in any form. The red light district, prostitution, has been banished from the region completely. I employ eight Christian chaplains."

Asked Feng about future evolutionary reforms.

"China's faith in evolutionary reform sponsored by foreigners is dead," he answered. "What China must do is to demand the uncondi-

tionality of her national birthright. When this is assured it will be time enough to talk of the details of readjustment."

While we were talking strains of Christian hymns, sung by Chinese soldiers, floated in from the barracks so I asked Feng to tell me about his army.

"Ninety per cent of my officers are Christians," he said, "and 70 per cent of my army, numbering 120,000, are likewise. They are forbidden the use of tobacco and liquor in any form. The red light district, prostitution, has been banished from the region completely. I employ eight Christian chaplains."

Asked Feng about future evolutionary reforms.

"China's faith in evolutionary reform sponsored by foreigners is dead," he answered. "What China must do is to demand the uncondi-

tionality of her national birthright. When this is assured it will be time enough to talk of the details of readjustment."

While we were talking strains of Christian hymns, sung by Chinese soldiers, floated in from the barracks so I asked Feng to tell me about his army.

"Ninety per cent of my officers are Christians," he said, "and 70 per cent of my army, numbering 120,000, are likewise. They are forbidden the use of tobacco and liquor in any form. The red light district, prostitution, has been banished from the region completely. I employ eight Christian chaplains."

Asked Feng about future evolutionary reforms.

"China's faith in evolutionary reform sponsored by foreigners is dead," he answered. "What China must do is to demand the uncondi-

tionality of her national birthright. When this is assured it will be time enough to talk of the details of readjustment."

While we were talking strains of Christian hymns, sung by Chinese soldiers, floated in from the barracks so I asked Feng to tell me about his army.

"Ninety per cent of my officers are Christians," he said, "and 70 per cent of my army, numbering 120,000, are likewise. They are forbidden the use of tobacco and liquor in any form. The red light district, prostitution, has been banished from the region completely. I employ eight Christian chaplains."

Asked Feng about future evolutionary reforms.

"China's faith in evolutionary reform sponsored by foreigners is dead," he answered. "What China must do is to demand the uncondi-

tionality of her national birthright. When this is assured it will be time enough to talk of the details of readjustment."

While we were talking strains of Christian hymns, sung by Chinese soldiers, floated in from the barracks so I asked Feng to tell me about his army.

"Ninety per cent of my officers are Christians," he said, "and 70 per cent of my army, numbering 120,000, are likewise. They are forbidden the use of tobacco and liquor in any form. The red light district, prostitution, has been banished from the region completely. I employ eight Christian chaplains."

Asked Feng about future evolutionary reforms.

"China's faith in evolutionary reform sponsored by foreigners is dead," he answered. "What China must do is to demand the uncondi-

tionality of her national birthright. When this is assured it will be time enough to talk of the details of readjustment."

While we were talking strains of Christian hymns, sung by Chinese soldiers, floated in from the barracks so I asked Feng to tell me about his army.

"Ninety per cent of my officers are Christians," he said, "and 70 per cent of my army, numbering 120,000, are likewise. They are forbidden the use of tobacco and liquor in any form. The red light district, prostitution, has been banished from the region completely. I employ eight Christian chaplains."

Asked Feng about future evolutionary reforms.

"China's faith in evolutionary reform sponsored by foreigners is dead," he answered. "What China must do is to demand the uncondi-

tionality of her national birthright. When this is assured it will be time enough to talk of the details of readjustment."

While we were talking strains of Christian hymns, sung by Chinese soldiers, floated in from the barracks so I asked Feng to tell me about his army.

"Ninety per cent of my officers are Christians," he said, "and 70 per cent of my army, numbering 120,000, are likewise. They are forbidden the use of tobacco and liquor in any form. The red light district, prostitution, has been banished from the region completely. I employ eight Christian chaplains."

Asked Feng about future evolutionary reforms.

"China's faith in evolutionary reform sponsored by foreigners is dead," he answered. "What China must do is to demand the uncondi-

tionality of her national birthright. When this is assured it will be time enough to talk of the details of readjustment."

While we were talking strains of Christian hymns, sung by Chinese soldiers, floated in from the barracks so I asked Feng to tell me about his army.

"Ninety per cent of my officers are Christians," he said, "and 70 per cent of my army, numbering 120,000, are likewise. They are forbidden the use of tobacco and liquor in any form. The red light district, prostitution, has been banished from the region completely. I employ eight Christian chaplains."

Asked Feng about future evolutionary reforms.

"China's faith in evolutionary reform sponsored by foreigners is dead," he answered. "What China must do is to demand the uncondi-

tionality of her national birthright. When this is assured it will be time enough to talk of the details of readjustment."

While we were talking strains of Christian hymns, sung by Chinese soldiers, floated in from the barracks so I asked Feng to tell me about his army.

"Ninety per cent of my officers are Christians," he said, "and 70 per cent of my army, numbering 120,000, are likewise. They are forbidden the use of tobacco and liquor in any form. The red light district, prostitution, has been banished from the region completely. I employ eight Christian chaplains."

Asked Feng about future evolutionary reforms.

"China's faith in evolutionary reform sponsored by foreigners is dead," he answered. "What China must do is to demand the uncondi-

tionality of her national birthright. When this is assured it will be time enough to talk of the details of readjustment."

While we were talking strains of Christian hymns, sung by Chinese soldiers, floated in from the barracks so I asked Feng to tell me about his army.

"Ninety per cent of my officers are Christians," he said, "and 70 per cent of my army, numbering 120,000, are likewise. They are forbidden the use of tobacco and liquor in any form. The red light district, prostitution, has been banished from the region completely. I employ eight Christian chaplains."

Asked Feng about future evolutionary reforms.

"China's faith in evolutionary reform sponsored by foreigners is dead," he answered. "What China must do is to demand the uncondi-

tionality of her national birthright. When this is assured it will be time enough to talk of the details of readjustment."

While we were talking strains of Christian hymns, sung by Chinese soldiers, floated in from the barracks so I asked Feng to tell me about his army.

"Ninety per cent of my officers are Christians," he said, "and 70 per cent of my army, numbering 120,000, are likewise. They are forbidden the use of tobacco and liquor in any form. The red light district, prostitution, has been banished from the region completely. I employ eight Christian chaplains."

Asked Feng about future evolutionary reforms.

"China's faith in evolutionary reform sponsored by foreigners is dead," he answered. "What China must do is to demand the uncondi-

tionality of her national birthright. When this is assured it will be time enough to talk of the details of readjustment."

While we were talking strains of Christian hymns, sung by Chinese soldiers, floated in from the barracks so I asked Feng to tell me about his army.

"Ninety per cent of my officers are Christians," he said, "and 70 per cent of my army, numbering 120,000, are likewise. They are forbidden the use of tobacco and liquor in any form. The red light district, prostitution, has been banished from the region completely. I employ eight Christian chaplains."

Asked Feng about future evolutionary reforms.

"China's faith in evolutionary reform sponsored by foreigners is dead," he answered. "What China must do is to demand the uncondi-

tionality of her national birthright. When this is assured it will be time enough to talk of the details of readjustment."

While we were talking strains of Christian hymns, sung by Chinese soldiers, floated in from the barracks so I asked Feng to tell me about his army.

"Ninety per cent of my officers are Christians," he said, "and 70 per cent of my army, numbering 120,000, are likewise. They are forbidden the use of tobacco and liquor in any form. The red light district, prostitution, has been banished from the region completely. I employ eight Christian chaplains."

Asked Feng about future evolutionary reforms.

"China's faith in evolutionary reform sponsored by foreigners is dead," he answered. "What China must do is to demand the uncondi-

tionality of her national birthright. When this is assured it will be time enough to talk of the details of readjustment."

While we were talking strains of Christian hymns, sung by Chinese soldiers, floated in from the barracks so I asked Feng to tell me about his army.

"Ninety per cent of my officers are Christians," he said, "and 70 per cent of my army, numbering 120,000, are likewise. They are forbidden the use of tobacco and liquor in any form. The red light district, prostitution, has been banished from the region completely. I employ eight Christian chaplains."

Asked Feng about future evolutionary reforms.

"China's faith in evolutionary reform sponsored by foreigners is dead," he answered. "What China must do is to demand the uncondi-

tionality of her national birthright. When this is assured it will be time enough to talk of the details of readjustment."

While we were talking strains of Christian hymns, sung by Chinese soldiers, floated in from the barracks so I asked Feng to tell me about his army.