WEDDING SERVICE HELD AT CHURCH

Miss Louise Stockdale Becomes Bride of Robert E. Bastian—Reception Follows—Go On Motor Trip.

A beautiful wedding was solemnized Saturday afternoon at 4:30 at the Central Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, when Miss Louise Stockdale, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Stockdale, 2531 Central Ave., became the bride of Robert E. Bastian, son of Mrs. W. A. Bastian.

The Rev. O. W. Filer read the service in a garden setting. On the posts of a gateway stood large baskets of dahlias. A profusion of flowers in the fall shades were intermingled with palms and ferns. Cathedral candles in floor standards lighted the scene. E. W. Wells, organist, played a program of bridal music preceding the ceremony, and Mrs. J. W. Costin sang "At Dawning," and "I Love You Truly." The wedding march from Lohengrin was played for the entry of the bride party, and during the ceremony Mr. Wells played "To a Wild Rose."

The two little nephews of the bride, George Stockdale Cornelius, and Edmund Warren Cornelius as ring bearers, led the bridal procession. They wore suits of brown velvet and pongee blouses. They carried the ring in a basket of fall flowers.

Mrs. W. A. Shoemaker, matron of honor, wore a gown of ashes of roses crepe Romaine, beaded in silver and rose beads. She wore a rather small hat to match, trimmed with lace of the same shade. She carried an arm bouquet of Columbia roses.

Miss Mildred Stockdale was her sister's maid of honor. She wore a pretty straight-line frock of autumnal brown georgette, beaded in gold beads and fashioned with a slightly flaring skirt. She wore a hat to match and carried an arm bouquet of Columbia roses.

Dr. W. A. Shoemaker was best man, and ushers were George H. Cornelius, Richmond Bastian and Maurice Stephenson.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a straight-line gown of bud rose crepe Romaine fashioned with a slightly flaring skirt, heavily beaded in fall shades. She wore a picture hat to match and carried a shoulder bouquet of Premet roses and valley lilies.

The ceremony was followed by an informal reception at the church. Mrs. Stockdale, mother of the bride, wore a gown of French gray, trimmed with gray lace and beads. She wore a black satin hat trimmed with steel beads. She wore a corsage of dark red roses. Mrs. Bastian, mother of the bridegroom, wore a dark blue georgette gown with hat to match.

Mr. and Mrs. Bastian have gone on a motor trip to Chicago, and the lake district. Mrs. Bastian traveled in a black flat crepe dress, trimmed with a profusion of tucks and an Ecor Irish lace collar. She wore a small black hat trimmed with ostrich, and a top coat to match.

Mr. and Mrs. Bastian will be at home after Oct. 17, at Willow Terrace. Out-of-town guests included Dr. and Mrs. A. A. Stockdale, Toledo, Ohio; Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Jordan, Chicago; Mrs. Clifford Jordan, Colfax, Ind., and Dr. and Mrs. W. A. Shoemaker, Wakarusa, Ind.

The Tangle

"Syd," asked Jack suddenly, "were you ever importuned by a young woman to dance?" "If you have, you probably will sympathize with me. Foolishly, I thought if I danced that I would not have to talk. The moment, however, that I got on the floor I grew panicky. I kept looking about to see if any one knew you or me. I was there to see me. Leslie, I swear to you, it was all innocent enough, but I could not help thinking what would happen if any one saw me dancing with that little stenographer. I felt sorry for myself; I felt sorry for the girl. I knew I had again turned one of my fifty-seven kinds of assiduity on tip. I quickly took the girl back to the table during the first intermission and waited impatiently until she had finished her dinner, and then, muttering that I had to get back home, we started for the city.

"More and more it was borne upon me that perhaps I was the biggest fool where women—all women—were concerned, on the face of the earth. I began to burn up the road, still thinking only of getting the silly little girl by my side home and getting to you. Fortunately, I had slowed down considerably as your face came up before me, when all at once one of those smart roadsters that are always driven by one of those youngsters who has one hand on the wheel and the other arm around a girl, swung in from a side street.

"There was a crash! I swear to you, Leslie, that even at that moment I didn't think of anything but of saving you from ending in the morning papers! That I had been joyriding with one of my stenographers, I think I went a little out of my mind. It was not for myself, but for you.

"Perhaps you all know, I am a very selfish man, and now that I am making an open confession, I may as well say that I didn't think anything about the occupants of that other car and very little about the occupants of my own car. I was just thinking about my wife.

"They say that a man reviews his whole life the moment he loses consciousness when drowning. In that moment, before my foot came down hard on the accelerator, I saw how foolishly unkind I had been to you, how unreasonably I had been acting. Blindly, I rushed away, adding pusillanimous cowardice to my other unaccountable action.

"I didn't get very far. I was overtaken by the cops, and you know the rest."

"What became of Maggie Stimpson?" asked Sally.

John started, and looked at her in a dazed fashion. I knew he had forgotten she was there.

"I don't know what became of her," he said, helplessly.

"I sent her home in a taxi," said Syd, crisply.

"Good old Syd!" murmured Jack. Syd responded with a cynical smile, while I, who was looking at him, did not understand. It seemed to me that that smile meant, "Don't thank me. I was not doing it for you."

Varnish Stain

Dear Martha Lee: "I have a dark green dotted voile dress which was washed today. The back, across the shoulders, still looks dirty. Rubbing doesn't take it out. It surely must be varnish stain. Can you suggest a way to take it out without fading the dress?"

WORRIED.

I'm sorry, but I can't. I, too, have a green dress that did the same thing, and I'm quite provoked. I'd like to know something to do, too.
