POLITICS HOLD ATTENTION OF CLUB WOMEN

Two in Hot Race for Presidency of State Federation.

By United Press
HAMMOND, Ind., Oct. 14.—Politics today held the attention of the delegates attending the convention of the Indiana Federation of Clubs here.

Indications today were that the contest for president between Mrs. Frank Sheehan of Gary, and Mrs. Hamet D. Hinkle of Vincennes, would be the most closely contested in the history of the organization. The election is Thursday.

Tuesday the campaign workers for Mrs. Sheehan succeeded in registering member of new Lake County organizations.

A series of luncheons at which politics will be the principal subject under discussion were to be held today.

Mrs. O. M. Pittenger of Indianapolis, in an address before the convention declared that "woman's place is still in the home" and urged the club members to keep this in mind.

When ballots are cast for officers the women also will be asked to vote on the question of raising the dues to the State organization fifty cents.

John followed the interne out of the reception room. I declined to go with them. Little Marquise, because I thought it was better to keep out of everything that I could. When my husband returned, I knew by his face he was further reassured.

"Young Hastings is a very decent sort of a chap, Leslie. He acknowledges that he was wholly to blame. He told me his father had telegraphed this morning that he would be here this afternoon and the hospital authorities think the girl will be able to be removed to her home tomorrow. It seems that the young couple are about to be married and Hastings had come on from Philadelphia to arrange the plans with the young woman's father and mother. Don't you think it would be a good plan for us to stop for Mrs. Atherton on our way to the office? It is still early, you know."

The moment we got into Sally's little drawing room, Jack blurted out: "That boy and girl will leave the hospital tomorrow. So, you see, Mrs. Atherton, everything is coming out all right after all."

"Is it?" answered Sally, ambiguously. "Listen to this. As I told you I would, I called up Maggie Stimpson this morning. I wanted to catch her before she started for the office."

"A man came to the phone and informed me, in a gruff voice, that Miss Stimpson was not going to the office today."

"Is she ill?" I inquired.

"No," he answered, "who is it that wants to know?"

"Mr. Prescott's secretary," was my reply.

"That's a lie," he affirmed, in an ugly tone of voice. "My daughter Maggie is Prescott's secretary and I am just preparing to go down to the office to just let him know that he cannot jeopardize the good name of my daughter, without hearing from me about it."

John gasped. He didn't seem quite to understand.

"What's that? Tell me again. What did he say?" he asked thickly, as soon as he got his voice.

Sally repeated the words.

"But, but," stammered Jack, "he didn't mean it. He's bluffing. Why I was only trying to be good to his daughter and if she told the truth, he knows it. I tell you, he was only bluffing."

"No, I don't think he was. It is quite evident the man has seen the newspapers, in which it says that the woman with Mr. Prescott was his stenographer, Margaret Stimpson. Whatever his daughter told him after seeing that, he would believe the worst."

"What did you say to him?" I questioned Sally.

"I didn't say anything. I just rang off."

Martha Lee's Column

Green Eyes

Dear Mrs. Lee: I have been going with a fellow for almost a year and I love him and he tells me he loves me. But when he would think I was working and couldn't be out he would be around one night when he thought I was in. He has asked me to marry him and he says he has turned the other girl down. I am 24 and he is 30. The girl is 17. He says she was just passing. But don't you think he would quit had he really cared as he should? I love him and would like to believe him if possible, as he is the only man I ever loved.

It stands to reason that he must care or he would not ask you to marry him. On the other hand, I should certainly have an understanding with him on the subject. If he is going to need feminine company as a pastime whenever your company is not available, then you'll have rather a hectic married life. Be very sure of your ground before you accuse him. Nothing is quite so easily misconstrued, nor leads to such serious breaks as false accusation.

CHICKIE

Tightwad

Dear Martha Lee: I am 27 years old and am engaged to a young man 24 years old. He says that he loves me very much and I love him very much. But when we are out with a crowd of girls and boys he lets the other fellows pay the bills. I am not of that disposition and it worries me and shakes me feel toward him the rest of the evening. I sometimes think that I will break the engagement because if he is stingy before we are married, he probably will be worse afterwards. What shall I do?

JANE

That is a very humiliating position to be thrust into. You might break him of it by ridiculing him, but that is dangerous to attempt unless you are a pastmaster of sarcasm. Perhaps he just doesn't know any better, and telling him might help.

Jealous

Dear Martha Lee: I am 18 and in love with a fellow 22. He tells me he loves me, and I also love him, but he is so jealous that I sometimes think I can't even like him. He has asked me several times to marry him, but I have refused only on account of his jealousy. Do you think that he would love me and that I would be satisfied if I were to marry him as jealous as he is?

WONDERING

I have known only one woman who married a jealous man and reformed him. But that was because she had a very good looker and he became less particular about her love. The only cure for jealousy is something that will remove the cause, not the effect. And the cause is an inferiority complex that can only be overcome by education for the mental ego.

Petitions were from Mary Stanford for a station at the southwest corner of the bridge and from Charles B. and Mary R. Spann for a station at the southeastern intersection corner.

Stomach Gas Seems To Press On Heart

"I suffered from indigestion (gas) pressing on heart and lungs. Adlerika did more for me than anything I ever tried." (Signed) E. Morris.

Intestinal Evacuant

There is now offered to the public a liquid preparation which is not only a wonderfully effective and QUICK intestinal evacuant, but which also seems to stimulate the glands of the intestinal tract and to cause expulsion of flatus (GAS). This preparation, known as Adlerika, is a valuable agent for the purpose of cleansing the bowels of matter which has been in the system a long time and which other less effective means have been unable to dislodge. It can't get along without Adlerika." (Signed) Dr. W. H. Bernhart.

J. E. Puckett (a friend of Adlerika) writes: "After taking Adlerika I feel better than for 20 years. Haven't language to express the impurities eliminated from my system."

Adlerika is a big surprise to people who have used only ordinary bowel and stomach medicines because of its REAL and QUICK action. Sold by leading druggists everywhere. In Indianapolis by the Hook Drug Co. and other leading druggists.—Advertisement.
