

RALSTON RITES SET SATURDAY

18 was gained largely through his own efforts, and he fitted himself so well that he was granted a teacher's license. For seven years he taught school in Owen County, saving his earnings with which to gain a higher education.

Following his years of teaching Ralston entered the Central Normal College at Danville, Ind., and was graduated at 27.

He returned to Spencer, Owen County and studied law in the old-fashioned way, by reading in the office of a friend.

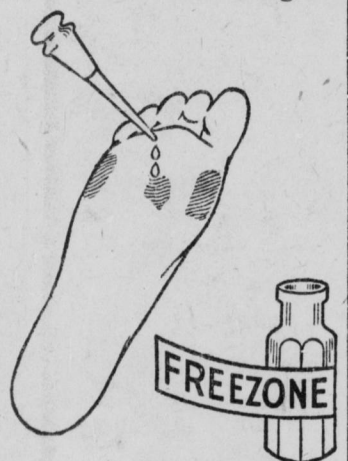

He was admitted to the bar in Owen County. During his law studies a friend gave the struggling young student, free board and he saved room rent by sleeping on a sofa in the law office.

Hearing of the death of a lawyer in Frankfort, Clinton County, Ralston went to that town to offer himself to the deceased's partner, but the lawyer did not want to take in an unknown and untried man.

It was mid-winter and Ralston's overcoat was threadbare and flimsy and he offered himself to the lawyer for merely enough to pay his board and laundry. The lawyer refused.

When "Tired Feeling" Hangs on—Beware of Chronic Fatigue

In thousands of cases that continual weak, tired, worn-out feeling, which rest doesn't banish and sleep doesn't correct, is an almost sure sign of debility due to chronic fatigue.

Don't confuse chronic fatigue with the ordinary "healthy" fatigue you feel after hard work. Ordinary fatigue is natural. But chronic fatigue—the serious kind—comes from within. Your nerves, muscles, organs, etc., have become debilitated and cannot function properly. This condition, if not corrected, may lead to far worse.

To conquer chronic fatigue, you must get at its cause—in the blood. As you know, it is in the blood that the life-giving force, the blood, circulates. When your blood is thin and pale, lacking in sufficient organic iron, that you become run down and suffer from that miserable tired feeling, weakness, nervousness, dizziness, palpitation, headache, backache, poor appetite, etc.

In this condition what you need is to strengthen your entire system by getting more organic iron into your blood. But don't take the old-fashioned mineral iron medicines, which many doctors now say do little good. Take organic iron—Nuxated Iron—which is like the organic iron in your blood. Unlike ordinary mineral iron, it will not injure the teeth or upset the stomach. Furthermore, being like the iron in your own blood, it is quickly assimilated and begins at once to put new strength into your system. It gives healthy color into pale, sallow faces. Take Nuxated Iron for just two weeks and you'll be astonished how every weak, tired feeling vanishes and you feel stronger and better in every way. Money back if not improved. At all good druggists.—Advertisement.

and Ralston spent the last of his dwindling cash for a ticket home. After his arrival home at Spencer, Ralston started for Brazil, in what was then Washington Territory, and in the railway station at Gosport met a Baptist minister, who suggested he go to Lebanon, Boone County, where they were in need of a young Democratic lawyer.

There Ralston struck up a partnership and immediately threw his whole efforts into his career. He tendered his services to the Democratic committee in a county campaign and, through his fervor, won his way to leadership. Following his efforts in the campaign, Ralston was flooded with business, and since then has had more than he could handle.

Becomes Leading Citizen

Ralston the lawyer became the leading citizen of Lebanon through his honesty, his uprightness and ability.

He soon became known in Indianapolis through change, in venue of cases from Marion County, adjoining Boone, and litigants from the State Capitol began to employ the young Lebanon lawyer.

Ralston's success as a lawyer in Lebanon was largely due to his acquaintance with every citizen eligible to jury duty in the county, his passion for facts, his clear, concise presentation of evidence and his thorough knowledge of the law.

Ralston was nominated for Governor by acclamation in the Democratic State convention of 1912.

During his four-year term he gave Indiana an administration which set a precedent and which has become a tradition in Hoosierdom. The State debt, which had been a campaign issue for years, was paid, leaving Indiana "solvent" for the first time in eighty years. His friends say there was a balance of $3,000,000 in the State treasury.

He was interested in State benevolent institutions, promoted the first State park and gave sympathetic attention and aid to State schools and universities.

Instituted Dixie Highway

He was deeply interested in good roads and called a meeting of the Governors of interested States and instituted the building of the Dixie Highway.

One of the outstanding incidents of his administration was the amicable settlement of the serious street railway strike in Indianapolis in 1913.

Traffic in Indianapolis was tied up on the eve of a municipal election and there was critical disorder in the streets.

Ralston attempted to bring about arbitration and failed. Then he ordered out the National Guard. Soldiers quietly marched into the city, took up their posts and camped about the Statehouse.

The following day thousands of strikers and sympathizers marched on the Statehouse. Representatives of the union visited the Governor and demanded removal of the troops. Ralston quietly discussed the situation, explained the law and said he believed it his duty to keep the peace. The committee was persuaded the Governor wanted to be fair.

New Stands By

Ralston then declared he would address the gathering outside.

Harry S. New, present Postmaster General, was with the Governor and attempted to dissuade him. Failing, New stood beside Ralston on the Statehouse steps.

In simple language Ralston told the men of his oath to defend the peace and dignity of the State and that it was the duty of every citizen to obey the laws.

The crowd dispersed, the strike was called off and traffic resumed.

Upon his retirement from the Governor's chair, Ralston retired for a time to his twenty-six acre farm had built "Hoosier Home," a beautiful country estate.

He joined the law firm of Ralston, Gates, Lalry, Van Nuys and Barnard, of which he was the head. Ralston's son, Julian, later was taken into the firm.

He practiced law in Indianapolis for five years before he was again called on to take up the party's standard.

After the big Republican landslide of 1920, in which Harding carried Indiana by a plurality of 185,000, it seemed that any Democrat was doomed to defeat. Ralston, however, was drafted to take up the banner of Democracy this time in the campaign for United States Senator against Albert J. Beveridge, the Republican nominee.

Rolls Up 30,000 Plurality

Ralston emerged from the strenuous campaign, fit and rugged and rolled up a plurality of 30,000 votes over Beveridge.

It was on the night the senatorial election returns were coming in and Ralston was surrounded by newspaper men at his country home, that the boom was started for Ralston for President.

One newspaper man said: "Well, Governor, you're likely to be a presidential candidate next."

From that hour on, the Governor's friends began quietly to boost Ralston and build one of the quietest, smoothest-working organizations in the history of the State.

Ralston later refused to accept the nomination for President. After Thomas Taggart had obtained virtually enough votes for his nomination at the New York convention a year ago last July, Ralston asked that his name be withdrawn.

The Ralston type brings back memories of Grover Cleveland, whom he very much resembles in character and appearance, politicians say. Ralston's political philosophy is summed up in his words:

"The salvation of the people and the success of popular government rests absolutely on the honesty and efficiency of the public servants. Without honesty, without intelligence and economy in public expenditures, no political party deserves the public confidence. All other issues are secondary."
