Epidemic of Disease at

OVERCROWDING BLAMED

Spread Checked Now Says
Superintendent.

An epidemic of typhoid fever at the Indiana State Reformatory, Pendleton, has resulted in Dr. Thurman Rice of the State Board of Health taking charge of the situation, it was learned today.

Superintendent A. F. Miles said over the telephone today that the situation is "not alarming," now being limited to three cases.

"The disease seems to be under control, although last week we had one case which started off bad, the patient having three hemorrhages."

Overcrowded

The fact that the institution has only 648 cells to house 1,579 men, resulting in terrible overcrowding, makes prisoners more susceptible to epidemics, it was said.

"We are keeping two boys in each of the 648 cells and take care of nearly 300 more in temporary quarters in one of the industrial buildings," said Superintendent Miles. "Some of the trustees sleep in corridors of the cell house."

Miles said the prisoners are not inoculated against typhoid unless an epidemic is threatened. It is not thought necessary just now to do so, he said.

Nether are prisoners inoculated as they are received, although Miles (Turn to Page 11)

Mayor Shank has delayed signing a contract to go into vaudeville because Mrs. Shank believes he is worth more than $500 a week.

Shank, who is seriously considering going back on the stage after his term expires Jan. 1, has two proposals.

Henry Burton, booking agent of Western Vaudeville Association, who offered Shank $500 a week for ten weeks, conferred with the mayor again today. Burton will ask him to "sign on the dotted line" Monday.

Thomas North, New York, representative of the Pathe Corporation, which produces Hal-Roach comedies, conferred with Shank this week about a plan for Shank to star in comedies and appear on the Keith vaudeville circuit.

"I am going to try for $1,000 a week, but maybe I'm not worth that much. Mrs. Shank tells me I am worth a lot more than $500," Shank said.

Whose Back Seat Holds Football?

THERE is something "all wet" about this good Samaritan stuff, thought Robert Colvin, 16, of 615 Carlyle Pl., today.

Robert and some boy friends were kicking Robert's football along Maple Rd., near Washington Blvd., when they saw a woman vainly trying to start her car.

Gallantly they offered to aid. The woman found she was out of gas. Colvin tossed his football into the back seat and said he would go get the gas.

When the car finally started the woman took the boys home. Robert hopped out, forgetting all about his football.

Now Robert doesn't know who the woman was and the woman doesn't know who Robert is or exactly where he lives.

So Robert put a classified ad in The Times to tell her.

And if the woman wants to keep a fine youngster believing it pays to help the other fellow, she'll drive right over to Robert's house with that football.

Not one of 2,000 teachers who attended closing session of the Indiana State Teachers' Association today is sure of his position longer than one year, it was revealed by William McAndrews, Chicago public schools superintendent.

McAndrews asked all who are certain of jobs longer than this year to raise their hands. He commented on the fact that no one responded. When he asked for those who have a position only this year, thousands of hands were elevated.

Town to Town

"If the wife of the president of the school board doesn't like your hat, you may be trading the well worn path from town to town that many teachers have trodden before you in search of a new job," McAndrews declared.

McAndrews said there is need of a teachers' tenure law and provision for old age the same as in large corporations.

Artillery Is Said to Have Bombed Unoccupied Cities.

Copyright, 1925, by United Press
LONDON, Oct. 24.—Charges that Greek artillery had bombed "completely unoccupied Bulgarian localities, killing and wounding civilians, including women and children," were made today by the Bulgarian minister of foreign affairs in a special cablegram from Sofia to the United Press, answering a United Press telegram addressed to Premier Alexander Zankoff.

PANGALOS MAKES THREATS

Greek Premier Does Not Intend to Withdraw Troops.

By United Press
LONDON, Oct. 24.—Greece is not only holding fast to territory she occupied in Bulgaria, but is determined to keep her grip on the region and not evacuate before the League of Nations council has handed down its decision on the Greece-Bulgaria conflict.

A decision on the question of evacuation can be taken in the Monday council session at Paris, but it is also possible that this decision would have to await an investigation of the spot by a council committee.

This word came early today out of Athens from the United Press correspondent there, following an interview with Premier Pangalos, in which the Greek leader declared his intention of retaining "our occupied territory" until Bulgaria accepts the terms of Greece's sharp note. "This note demands of the Bulgars upward of $80,000 as reparation for the border clash in the vicinity of Demirhisar."

As an indication that Pangalos' threats of camping on Bulgar soil were not empty words, the Sofia messages announced that the Greeks were digging in along a twenty-mile front running four to eight miles deep into Bulgarian territory.

Greece today named her minister to Paris, M. Carapanos, as Greek representative, at Monday's meeting of the league council.

The Vienna correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph cabled Sofia reports that the Greeks had resumed their advance near the Macedonia frontier last night and again bombarded the town of Petrich.

Meantime, out of the Bulgar capital came reports peasants fleeing before the Greeks in the Petrits region, stricken with fear. Sofia messages told of alleged Greek "atrocities." The Bulgars claimed the Greeks in their drive into Bulgaria had pillaged homes and desecrated the graves of World War dead, meantime requisitioning the stocks of grain and cattle of peasants along their path.

EASTERN PRESS
RAPPS JACKSON'S
SENATOR CHOICE

Baltimore Sun Cartoon Shows Robinson Garbed in Klan Robes.

Times Washington Bureau.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.—The eastern press is dubious over the appointment of Arthur R. Robinson, Indianapolis lawyer, to succeed the late Senator Samuel M. Ralston.

Edward B. McLean's Washington Post, considered unusually close to the Washington Administration, admits a fear that the appointment may mean the election of two Democratic Senators in Indiana next year.

Nationally Unknown

The Post says editorially: "Among the aspirants for the office were a number of men who had performed distinguished service to party and State, but Governor Jackson saw fit to appoint an untried and nationally unknown man for this important post.... One thing is certain the appointment has kept old scores open and may create a condition fraught with danger to Republican success when two Senators are to be chosen."

"The assurance that the appointee will support President Coolidge 'in all things' affords only little consolation, if in the end, it may mean the election of two Democrats to the Senate.... The Governor, perforce, found himself between the devil and the deep sea, and in endeavoring to escape from his dilemma, hit upon a solution that may prove the ruin of his own party and the defeat of whatever future political ambitions he himself may have."

Deepens Sorrow

Beside a cartoon titled "The Gentleman From Indiana," and depicting a man in Ku-Klux Klan raiment, the Baltimore Sun has this to say editorially:

"It is a very great pity that the Governor of Indiana failed to appoint Mr. Beveridge to the Senate.... It is not only that the Governor has missed the chance to send to Washington a Senator who would have served his country and State with the most credit, but he seems to have picked from the field the least admirable of the lot.... The selection very greatly deepens the sorrow over the death of Senator Ralston."

The New York Times demands: "Will the Republican campaign motto be, in effect: 'A vote for Jackson and the Ku-Klux Klan is a vote for Coolidge'—who has just hit that phalanx of patriots in the nose."

All in all, the consensus of opinion in Washington and hereabouts is that Coolidge would have been better served by the appointment of "Affable Albert" Beveridge than by a man who was once State Senator.

In Indianapolis They Shake
Hands Despite Old World
Squabble.

When Greek meets Bulgar might be the title of this—but it isn't.

When Greek meets Bulgarian, is more appropriate since these young huskies are sons of Greek and Bulgarian families of Indianapolis. And just to show you that the old world troubles aren't affecting their friendship, they're shaking hands.

Nick George, is a son of Mike George, 740 W. New York St., and young Pete Vasiloff Arndoff is a son of Vasil Slanoff Arndoff, 636 W. Washington St. The fathers are both merchants of West Washington St.

The Old World and its wars is a long way off from these peaceful young citizens.

"We're Americans now," they insist. Not that the questions of the war haven't been discussed, because they have. Bulgarian and Grecian families of Indianapolis have many relatives in the old countries, but so far, none have been heard of actively engaged in the border skirmishes. But patriotism to nationalities has been merged in to the unity of Americanization, and though each man stoutly maintains that his nation is not the offender, still that far-off battle cry hasn't affected the neighborliness of our Bulgarian and Greek citizens.

"Come back this afternoon," said one man, "and I will show you how many of our Macedonian schools and churches were closed by this war. It is distressing."

But there was no display of passion. Just a regret in his voice that the men of the old countries couldn't be so happy and at peace as the men in this land.

"It is just a capitalist's war," said another in the same tone.

So these young citizens, born Americans, are still staunch friends, and true.

Butler and Wabash College alumni were "slickered up" today for the annual gridiron clash at Irwin field. War spirit between the two colleges was undampened.

Despite prospects of a steady all-day rain, a delegation of 1,000 students and townsmen arrived over special cars from Crawfordsville to back the Little Giants. A spirited parade was staged through the downtown section.

A record crowd was expected despite the inclement weather. Prof. Jasper Craigwell, "grand old man" of the Wabash faculty, has threatened to resign if Wabash loses.

The Wabash horde, several hundred strong, arrived on special cars at the traction terminal station, shortly after 10 a. m., and paraded through downtown streets.

At the head of the procession was a dilapidated buggy propelled by a dilapidated horse. Autos and the Wabash band led by Larry Harris and rosters led by Jack Scott, the yell leader, an Indianapolis boy, followed.

CANDIDATES TO DELIVER CHURCH
TALKS SUNDAY

Appearances Announced as Campaign Enters Final Stretch.

Sunday appearances before the churches were scheduled for the two candidates for mayor over the weekend, when the last stretch of the municipal campaign will be under way.

Walter Myers, Democratic nominee, will speak at the Simpson M. E. Church, Missouri and Eleventh Sts., at 11 a. m. Sunday. John L. Duval, his Republican opponent, is scheduled at 2:30 a. m. at rally day services at the Barth Place M. E. Church.

Tonight Myers will speak at University Heights, Shelby and Naomi Sts., and 2508 W. Michigan St. Duval, in an address at the Knights of Pythias Hall, Senate Ave. and Walnut St., Friday night, said he draws no more money as treasurer than the law allows.

Voters Hear Myers

Myers spoke at 401½ W. Michigan St. to an audience of colored voters.

"Candidates for council on the Republican ticket are men of impartial views who have a keen desire to serve the people," Duval said, in reply to the assertion by Myers, that one Republican, councilman candidate is a convicted bootlegger.

"No one man can reduce taxes," Duval asserted. "I don't propose to tell what I intend to do when I know I am not telling the truth. But taxes can be reduced by following out the economical examples set by Coolidge in the nation and Jackson in the State."

Meredith Nicholson, author, said the Republican campaign in 1924 was run by a man who is behind prison bars in Noblesville now, that Senator James E. Watson has never stood for "one big strong, independent thing" and that Albert J. Beveridge is the only prominent Republican leader who has any brains.

Deery Heard

"Members of the dry squads of our police department here so busy obtaining search warrants for homes of our citizens they could not remember from which court they obtained the warrants to enter one woman's property," James E. Deery, former city judge, said at 2918 Arsenal Ave.

Deery said Walter Myers would not permit law abiding citizens to be humiliated and annoyed by policemen "whose activities are more in the interests of some one's political ambitions than in the interest of law enforcement."

Probe Ordered When Federal Prisoner Tells Court That Drugs Are Also Smuggled Into State Penitentiary.

Investigation of alleged smuggling of dope to prisoners in the Marion County Jail and Indiana State Prison at Michigan City was started today by Federal authorities.

Noyse Edward Price, 2431 N. Talbot St., sentenced to serve a year and a day in the Federal Penitentiary at Leavenworth on charges of forging prescriptions to obtain dope, told Federal Judge Robert C. Baltzell that he knew prisoners might obtain "shots" at the jail if they were "in with the gang."

He said he was in the jail about eighteen months ago and knew the men smuggling in the dope, but did not know who was doing it now. He also said narcotics could be obtained by prisoners at Michigan City.

"I've heard about the Michigan City proposition and I think it ought to be investigated," District Attorney Cavin said.

Judge Baltzell hesitated. Sheriff Ommer Hawkins said that narcotic prisoners were carefully guarded and there had been no signs of any dope being taken by them.

When court convenes Monday the tenth day of the case will have been reached. While some observers have been of the opinion that the jury will be chosen before the end of next week, others think the entire week will be spent in the same way as the two preceding.
