

BILLY SUNDAY TALKS ON CRIME

'World, on Way to Hell, Breaking Speed Limit.'

CHICAGO, Oct. 29.—Billy Sunday, the evangelist, stopped off in Chicago, Thursday, long enough to unnumber a few hot shots on crime, prohibition, religion and divorce. In a running interview from one train to another in the Union Station, Sunday declared:

"America's going to hell so fast that she's breaking the speed limit. There never was a time when there was so little respect for the laws of God and man."

"Looseness of all kinds—drinking, divorce, everything—is rampant. You can no more repeal prohibition than you can dam Niagara."

"Bolshevism, superman philosophy and Godlessness are at the root of most of the evil."

Sunday came in from Oregon, where he has finished a campaign of evangelism. Five minutes later he was aboard a train for his old home at Winona Lake, Ind.

Times Pattern Service

A type of dress that every woman wants for practical wear, is shown in Design No. 2567. It is one-piece, with standing collar that may also be worn open. See small view! The small diagrams show exactly how your material appears after it has been cut out. Simplicity and smartness are combined in this design. Even the amateur sewer will experience no difficulty in making it. Tweed, twill, plaid woolen or crepe satin is appropriate. Cuts in sizes 16 years, 36 to 42 inches bust. The 36-inch size takes 3 1/2 yards of 40-inch material with 1/2 yard of 27-inch contrasting. The outline sketches are just to give you an idea of how easy it is to make. Complete instructions with pattern. Our patterns are made by the leading Fashion Designers of New York City and are guaranteed to fit perfectly.

Every day The Times will print on this page pictures showing the latest in up-to-the-minute fashions.

This is a practical service for readers who wish to make their own clothes.

You may obtain this pattern by filling out the coupon below, enclosing 15 cents and mail it to the pattern department of The Times.

I wish, Ruth, you could have seen Jack's face as he left me to tell his mother what I had said. It looked just like the face of a little boy who was going out into the woods to get a good strapping.

Shortly afterward he came back and Mrs. Prescott was with him. Shamefacedly, my husband waited until his mother had given me such a tongue-lashing as I had never heard before in my life.

I stood and took it all, Ruth, because it was John's mother, but had it been any one else I would have taken that furious old woman by the shoulders and pushed her out the door.

"I cannot understand your great love for that oldest boy, Leslie. Although every one knows that he does not belong to you, I sometimes think you care for him more than you do for your own flesh and blood."

"No, I don't love him any more than I do my youngest child, but I do not know any difference between them and I might as well tell you that I must be allowed to raise my own children in my own way. If John has told you that that is the only condition under which you will be welcome in this house, he has told you the truth."

Mrs. Prescott wheeled upon her son.

"John Prescott, are you going to stand for that and hear your wife turn your mother out of doors?"

John kept his temper admirably. "Leslie is not doing that, mother. She's only trying to tell you that you must not interfere with the children."

"Interfere with her children! Does she not know that I began to bring up a boy before she was born?"

"Well, I expect," said John grimly, "that it is because she knows you have made such a failure with me that she is afraid to let you have any say with her children."

If Mrs. Prescott had had the slightest sense of humor, this speech of John's might have cleared the air, but as it was, she just stood and glared at him for a few moments and then left the room as though she had been insulted as never before in her life.

I turned to Jack. He looked perfectly blank.

"What shall we do now?" he asked.

"Well, since you have asked me," I said, "if I were you I would leave your mother quite alone. Treat her nicely, but that is all. You see, John, I can not have her running my house or my children."

"By the way," I continued, "I am sending the boys and Hanna and the other nurse out in the country while I am with Ruth. I'm afraid there would be an open battle if I left Hanna and Mrs. Prescott in."

The hostess was assisted by Mesdames Charles A. Clark, Oliver H. Clark and Phillip A. Hennessey.

Misses Doris and Dorothy Prater, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Prater, 921 Edison Pl., will leave Wednesday, to spend the winter in Texas.

TOWNS READY FOR ELECTION

Several Contests Scheduled Over County.

The municipal election in Indianapolis, Tuesday, is not the only political combat to be in the limelight. Citizens of several of Marion County towns will go to the polls to elect officers.

In Beech Grove there are four tickets in the field for town board members, two clerk and treasurer. They are the Citizens', People's, Independent and Progressive tickets.

The men and women are lined up against each other at Clermont, northwest of the city. Three trustees and a town clerk will be elected.

At Southport there is only one ticket in the field. At Ravenswood, three tickets are competing. Woodruff Place will elect two trustees, Tuesday. Only two persons are running.

Martha Lee's Column

Etiquette Hound

Dear Martha Lee: How does one show interest in a conversation when the subject is something that he knows nothing about?

How should a young girl, brought up among people who had no manners, taste, act when invited to the home of some wealthy friends whom she has recently met. They are giving a dinner, and she is afraid of her table manners, of her dancing, and of her conversation.

How should one dress for a dinner party? What subjects of conversation would you suggest? What questions should one ask to show interest in a conversation? How should one answer when a person to whom we have just been introduced is leaving, and says "I'm very glad to have met you?"

That's a large order! And the first answer to all these questions is: Use your common sense.

A woman is a better actress in such a situation than a man. Listen attentively, if you are supposed to be included, and show by outward appearance, anyway, that you are enjoying the talk. Most people can't be expected to discuss lectures, and higher sciences, but its easy enough to evince interest in most casual conversations, at least.

I hardly think such a situation as this will arise, if the wealthy persons know whom they are inviting. This question sounds like one of the etiquette book advertisements. But should such a thing happen, the girl would not expect to learn in twenty-four hours that which has taken other persons a lifetime, and been in bred in them, so she would be as natural and graceful as possible. She has no business accepting such an invitation if she is afraid, for she will make herself and her hostess most unhappy. A good book on etiquette will give her some points on hunting among the forest of silver (although simplicity is the keynote now, and forests of silver are not in good taste.) If she is naturally graceful she can get by with her dancing, and a pretty girl doesn't always have to converse. But if she does, then make her speak naturally just as she'd do to other good friends.

A woman should wear an evening gown, not too décolleté. A man should wear a Tuxedo.

Newspapers and magazines are check full of subjects. Follow the trend of the thought and bring up current topics at the moments when they bear on the conversation.

Say "Thank you," courteously.

COATS HAVE JABOTS

Some of the newest coats feature the jabot front which falls in graceful ripples to the waistline. It is a more flattering neckline than we have had in some time.
