

GRAND JURY TO INQUIRE INTO PAPER CHARGES

Immorality, Drunkenness Alleged to Exist at College.

By United Press
GRAND FORKS, N. D., Nov. 6.—The Harpoon, the deadly pink sheet, 5,000 of which were distributed one night at the University of North Dakota last spring, will be investigated by a district court grand jury meeting today.

The Harpoon struck terror to the hearts of students and faculty when it was found one morning at the doors of fraternity houses and dormitories. It dealt in no instabilities, but, calling a spade a spade, made open charges, ranging from immorality, drunkenness and doping, down to parsimony, egotism, and imbecility.

Professor Attacked

Students and professors, both men and women, were vigorously attacked. No serious charges, however, were made against any of the women members of the faculty.

Last spring faculty investigators were said to have traced the printing to a shop in a small North Dakota town, but the owner of the shop was unable to identify any of the students in the university year book as those who brought him copy.

At the opening of college this year, President Kane announced that the authors were known and that none was in school this year.

Petting Parties Exposed

Exposed in the Harpoon ranged from alleged "insiders" on university politics to purported glimpses of Sunday evening darkened parlor scenes, other petting parties and drinking bouts. One "real party" was described in detail to protect "susceptible, unsophisticated maidens off the farm" from the "glib-tongued fast set."

One professor was likened to a "he-duck" with a "dried-up-potato-like face that takes on the official opiate grin," having a "weazened, drug-soaked neck," being "deceitful, hypocritical, low and mean," and "given to attempts to seduce young co-eds."

No charge was so revolting that the Harpoon softened the attack by leaving the names to imagination. Nothing in the history of the university ever caused so much comment or such bitter denunciation.

BROTHER IN DOG HOUSE

Dispute Over a Woman Leads Man to Isolate Relative.

By N.E.A. Service
OXFORDSHIRE, England, Nov. 6.—On the roof of an old manor house in Oxfordshire one may find a dog kennel.

The kennel was never intended for a dog, however. It was built by the owner of the house for his brother. The two had fallen out over a woman.

ODD NAME OF SHIP.

LONDON—Nicknamed "H. M. S. Methusalem" because of the long time she has been building, Britain's latest super-cruiser, the Eddington, has been commissioned as a flagship on the East Indies station. Work started on the ship in 1917.

JEWEL SNATCHERS.

LONDON—Jewel snatchers stand outside London theaters and grab precious pendants and other articles from women leaving the playhouse. The police have started a vigorous campaign to put an end to such daring thefts.
