POLICE BAND BOOSTS CITY

Valuable Advertising Medium, Says Mayor.

The Police and Fireman's Band has proven a valuable advertising medium for Indianapolis, Mayor Shank said today.

The band is well equipped for street and concert work, having uniforms and instruments representing an investment of about $7,000, all raised through concerts and dances. It does not play for hire, and is available only for public purposes tending to promote civic welfare. William T. Bailey, assistant city attorney, is director.

Personnel includes police, firemen, city employees and others. They donate their time. It is seldom police and firemen play in the band during hours they are on duty, Bailey said.
