

BUTLER COEDS SEEK 'HE' MEN HUSBANDS

No Lilies or Cake Eaters for us, Say Girls in Questionnaire Answers—Boys Give Ideas, Too.

"We want real HE men for husbands," said Butler University when asked what type men they intended to pick for their future mates. "No lilies or cake eaters for us," they said.

Prominent men on the Bulldog campus desired wives who could be partners and help with financial burden.

All of the students who answered the Times questionnaire, "What type of person do you intend to choose for your future mate?" took for granted they would enter the field of matrimony some day.

"Petting" was disapproved by four and one male student, but was accepted with reservations by others. "Petting makes me sick," was the frank opinion of one girl.

Other intimate questions in the questionnaire confidentially asked a number of leading students on the Butler campus met with a variety of answers.

Wants Good Dancer

Caroline M. Godley, 2458 N. Alabama St., associate editor of Butler Collegian, said: "How do I know whether college romances are successful, and I don't know anything about petting. Popularity in a husband counts for a lot. I don't approve of a man smoking, but I think I'll let my husband do it if he wants to. He must not drink, however. It really doesn't matter whether my husband has money. He must be a very good dancer. I want an educated husband, but he shouldn't know more than I do. I want a real he man and one I can love. No, I haven't found him yet."

Wilson S. Dailey, 2739 College Ave., editor of Butler Drift, said: "College romances are O. K. The color of hair and eyes doesn't make much difference to me. I want a partner for my wife, and one who can economize to help me build a home. I don't approve of smoking, drinking or petting, but my wife must be able to dance and have a college education. Popularity isn't much; it's the girl's personality that counts."

May Drink a Little

Dorothy F. Carroll, 2429 N. Meridian St., member of Chimes said: "Petting makes me sick. Most fellows have one date with you and when they find out you don't pet, they drop you. Smoking for my husband will be all right and he may drink a little. I think college romances are successful. My husband must be a brunette and have brown eyes, should dress neatly and be presentable. He must be a good sport, peppy, educated, and he will have to support me. A college education isn't essential, but I wouldn't marry a man for a degree alone."

Evans Cochran, 5336 University Ave., a freshman, said: "Petting isn't so bad, it all depends on the place. I don't care about the color of my wife's hair but it must not be bobbed. Popularity is an asset. My wife must not drink but she can smoke. I believe dress is a minor item. Dancing helps."

Elizabeth G. Hoffmann, 2805 Evans Cochran, 5336 University Ave., a freshman, said: "Petting isn't so bad, it all depends on the place. I don't care about the color of my wife's hair but it must not be bobbed. Popularity is an asset. My wife must not drink but she can smoke. I believe dress is a minor item. Dancing helps."

The Yell Leader

Thomas F. Smith, 3427 Broadway, yell leader, said: "I don't believe college romances are successful because the couple just fall in love with love and that's all. My wife must dress neatly and modestly, but she must not drink or smoke. I don't approve of petting unless marriage is intended. A man should support his wife absolutely. If he can't support her he should stay single all his life. Color of hair and eyes make no difference in love to me."

Valmore McLeay, 3027 N. New Jersey, president of Butler University interfraternity council, said: "College romances are not successful because most girls are just out to get a fraternity wife and not to get married. My wife can drink and smoke if she likes. Petting is all right at college, but it is awfully unnecessary sometimes. I expect my wife to help me with the financial burden until we get a good start in life. Neat clothing has a lot to do with successful marriage and I believe both husband and wife should be able to dance."

Wants Home Man

Dorothy A. Stephenson, 925 Fairfield, member of Scriblers' Club, said: "The man I marry must have a future, dress neatly, be interesting, an athlete, have a fair education, a variety of tastes, and he MUST BE A HOME MAN. I don't like them if they drink, smoke or pet around me. College romances are not successful. Popularity or color of hair and eyes has no effect on my love."

David W. Kohnold, 15 S. Ritter Ave., president of senior class, said: "Petting doesn't make any difference

First Santa Claus Letter Received

THE first Santa Claus letter has been received at the postoffice, and Robert Bryson exhibited its laboriously scrawled envelope. "This small boy seems to be principally concerned in knowing whether Santa has plenty of sand diggers on hand," Bryson remarked.

"The letters will be coming in thick and fast before long. Many of them, revealing actual needs, are handed over to those who investigate, and if possible, make reality of the little ones' dreams," Bryson said.

to me. I prefer a brunette with brown eyes and one who can wear clothes well. I don't want a clinging vine sort of a girl, but one who could be self-supporting and act as a partner in my life undertaking. Popularity is an asset but not a necessity. I will disapprove of my wife smoking or drinking. I want to have enough money to live on before I get married and hope to have a wife who is a compatible spirit. I realize my ideal is rather hard to locate."

TRIES TO END LIFE

Man Found In Room With Hose From Gas Jet In Mouth.

Locked in his room at the home of Mrs. Alice Zant, 603 Market St., James Edwards, 76, was found today in serious condition as result of an attempt to end his life with gas. A rubber hose fastened to the gas jet was clamped in his teeth. Edwards has been in ill health for four years, relatives said. He was taken to city hospital.
