Morale of Air Units Usually High Despite Poor Equipment.

By United Press
WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—Aviation equipment used by the National Guard is obsolete and unsuitable and in a short time will be unfit for flying purposes according to the annual report of Maj. Gen. C. C. Hammond, chief of the Militia Bureau of the Army, made public today.

Hammond declared that rapid deterioration in equipment and the decreasing stock of war time Air Service equipment and supplies available for the National Guard make it essential that funds be provided for the purchase of new airplanes.

Despite the lack of suitable equipment, Hammond declared that inspections of the air units showed them to be excellently conducted and that the efficiency and high morale of the personnel was noteworthy.

TIMBER FAMINE IN U. S. FEARED BY SEC. WORK

Annual Report Shows Nation's Natural Resources Are Dwindling.

By United Press
WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—A warning that at the present rate of consumption the Nation soon will be confronted by a timber famine, was sounded today by Interior Secretary Work in his annual report.

"With the disappearance of the Nation's supply," he pointed out, "all available lands containing timber should engage the attention of Congress."

Safeguarding Uncle Sam's vast estate of natural resources has been Secretary Work's principal task, he stated.

Conservation of these resources, meaning economic use without waste and an intelligent distribution as to time, is finding systematic application in the administration of his department, Work declared.

Farm Development Rises

He stated that after a "hopeless" condition two years ago, an appraisal of reclamation work has been made with the result that $60,000,000 in new projects has been delayed because of the danger of over-development.

"The acre construction cost of these new projects will be more than double that of older projects," said Work.

"The cost of developing farms has increased in like ratio to project construction cost.

"Whether the lands will be sufficiently productive to attract qualified settlers after the government has completed the irrigation works, is the question to be answered before new projects are recommended."

New Grazing Law

There are a dozen waterpower plants operating now in the United States of greater capacity for developing primary power than the site of Muscle Shoals and an equal number of available sites of equal possibilities of development. Work stated, minimizing the importance of the single project in the southeast which has been the subject of so much controversy.

A new grazing law was urged to permit establishment of grazing districts by Presidential proclamation which would do away with "gratuitous use of the public domain as an unrestricted range for livestock" resulting in overgrazing. There is no charge or contro of the 185,000,000 acres now being utilized in this fashion, he declared.
