SALADS

CHEESE BALLS
Whites 2 eggs.
1/4 teaspoon salt.
1/4 teaspoon paprika.

Beat whites of eggs until stiff and dry. Mix cheese, salt, flour, mustard and paprika and add to egg whites. Add more cheese if necessary to make stiff enough to mold. Make into tiny balls about an inch in diameter and roll in cracker crumbs. Drop into deep hot fat and fry a golden brown. It will take two or three minutes to brown them. Drain on heavy brown paper and serve. If necessary, reheat in the oven before serving. These little concoctions made with cheese should not be served with a salad containing cheese, but they are an excellent accompaniment for fruit salad, jellied vegetable salad, plain vegetable salad, head lettuce or endive served with French dressing.

LETTER FROM SALLY ATHERTON TO MRS. LESLIE PRESCOTT

When I got your telegram, dear Leslie, I fairly frothed at the mouth. The idea of that old woman taking it upon herself to write you such horribly disgusting things about your husband's accident was more than I could possibly stand. At first I thought I would go directly to Mr. Prescott and then I realized how foolish it would be to stir him up as I knew he would be stirred up if he had to have an interview and understanding with his mother.

You see, my dear, I remember what times you have had with her in the past. I wonder if all women of the older generation have such nasty minds and such immoral reactions to the most everyday occurrences as has your mother-in-law.

And yet, after all, I think her first idea was not so much to hurt me as to hurt you. She wanted to make you very unhappy. She wanted not only to tell you that you were derelict in your duties as a wife but she wanted to make you jealous which of course, I know is not possible.

She never liked me either and the second day after Mr. Prescott's accident, she waylaid me in the hall just outside his door and in the most holler-than-thou manner, said to me "You will pardon me, Mrs. Atherton, but I think that you do not realize just how your visits to my son might be taken by the servants in the house. If you will let me know at what hours you are going to visit Mr. Prescott so that I can be present, I will do so at whatever inconvenience to myself. Personally I do not think it quite the thing for a young woman, whether she be engaged in official capacity or not, to spend four or five hours a day in the room of a young man who is obliged to keep to his bed."

For a minute, Leslie, I could not speak. I don't think I was ever so furious in my life. She knew very well my relations with you, that you are one of my very best friends and she also knew that I would not give up my independence for any man on earth, let alone your husband, who would be the last man on earth under the circumstances. I almost was ready to strike her; in fact, she moved a little away from me. I think she expected me to strike her as I blurted out:

"I think you have the nastiest mind of any woman, young or old, with whom I have come in contact in all my life."

Forsaken

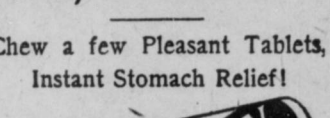

Mrs. Bert Jester: I don't think I would go back to my husband if I were you. He is apparently a coward, cruel, unfaithful, selfish, and a bad influence. When your child is born, get a loan and as soon as you are able—don't try to work too soon—get a job and begin paying the loan back. If you will budget your expenses, and really start in to take care of yourself, it won't be so hard. I think your husband will do your baby more harm than good, and you can bring the child up better by yourself.

Wants Constancy

Unhappy Belle: Oh, my dear, don't marry a religious fanatic! You will live a life of torture if you do. Your soul will be warped and twisted because such people see biblical commandments for their own selfish ends, though they may not be conscious of it. Religion is necessary in every one's life, of course. We have to look higher than ourselves. But fanatics are, more often than
